Equally important was the action on the tariff upon products of the Philippines. We gave them a reduction of 25 per cent. and would have given them a reduction of 55 per cent. and would have given them a reduction of 55 per cent. more had it not been for the opposition, in the hurried closing days of the last session, of certain gentlemen who, by the way, have been representing themselves both as peculiarly solicitous for the interests of the Philippine people and as special champions of the lowering of tariff duties. One point we must steadily keep in mind. The question of tariff revision, speaking broadly, stands wholly apart from the question of dealing with the trusts. No change in tariff duties can President Stands Pat for Protection of Training and the so-called trust problem. Certain great trusts or great corporations are wholly unaffected by the tariff. ADDRESS AT STATE CAPITOL. (BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS-P.M.)

It is, of course, a mere truism to say fantry, U.S.A., from Fort Snelling.

in joint session received the President delivered a brief and eloquent prayer

interests of the country as a whole, and not with reference to the temporary needs of any political party. It is almost as necessary that our policy should be stable as that it should be wise. A nation like ours could not long stand the ruinous policy of readjusting its business to radical changes in the tariff at short intervals, especially when, as now, owing to the immense extent and variety of our products, the tariff schedules carry rates of duty on thousands of different articles. Sweeping and violent changes in such a tariff, touching so vitally the interests of all of us, embracing agriculture, labor, manufactures, and commerce, would be disastrous in any event, and they would be fattal to our present well-being if approached on the theory that the principle of the protective tariff was to be abandoned. The business world, that is, the entire American world, cannot afford, if it has any regard for its own welfare, even to consider the advisability of abandoning the present system.

Yet, on the other hand, where the intem.
Yet, on the other hand, where the industrial conditions so frequently change as with us must of necessity be the case, it is a matter of prime importance that we should be able from time to

The President spoke at some length on his well-known views as to good citisenship.

In the executive chamber a brief reception was held, the President being introduced to many of the State officers and leaders of the Legislature and others. A large platform had been erected at the east entrance to the Capitol, where a crowd of many thousands held their places for over two hours, before the arrival of the President, and stood in place through the time of his speech inside the Capitol, and during his remarks outside. Gov. Van Sant introduced the President almost immediately after his appearance on the stand, although nearly five minutes had to elapse before the cheering that greeted the appearance of the President's well-known figure and features had subsided.

The President spoke on "good citizenship," following the general lines of his previous address to the legislators. The nation, he said, could be no better than the individuals who compose it and if we wished for a strong and progressive nation, we must cultivate strength and individuality among our citizens. He referred to his now famous letter on "race suicide," stating that while the letter had attracted much more attention than he imagined it would, yet he was glad of it. He reaffirmed in strong terms the sentiments he had therein expressed, and believed that the discussion which had been started would have a marked effect upon the race. We were, he said, by the amalgamation of foreign nationalities, the intermarriage of the sturdy foreign immigrants who had sought our shores, evolving a new race—the American. He referred to the great sums being spent by the Western States in the education of the education of the home.

From the Capitol the entire party were driven through a small part of the residence section, lack of time limiting the drive, and at the corner of selby avenue and Dale streets, special

ST. PAUL (Minn.) April 4.—President Roosevelt spent but three hours in this city this afternoon, before being whisked over to Minneapolis in Thomas Lowry's private electric care for an equally strenuous period in that city. The President's special trains was one minute ahead of the schedule, arriving on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul at 2:29, after an unevential run from Winona, where a large crowd had listened to him, and cheered him for less than five minutes. On the run up a few minutes were given to the people at Lake City, whose cheers brought out a hearity expression of thanks from the President.

As the train pulled through the St. Paul yards to the Union depot, Battery A of the Minnesota National Guard, stationed on the other side of the river, boomed out the Presidential salute, in which the engines in the yards, and the strong lungs of an immense crowd joined. A committee headed by Gov. Van Sant, Mayor Smith and Brig. Gen. Kobbe, U.S.A., briefly welcomed the party, who were at once taken for a carriage drive through the downtown streets, which had been handsomely decorated with flags in honor of the city's guest. The Grand Army Veterans led the procession included the local companies of the Minnesota National Guard, many of them Spanish War veterans, and the Twenty-first Infantty, U.S.A., from Fort Snelling. At the Capitol the House and Senate in joint session received the President.

CLARK NOMINATES COCKRELL (BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.) (BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.)
MEXICO (Mo.) April 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Congressman Champ Clark in a signed interview says: "If the Democrats are united in 1904 and make a good nomination they will win. The main issues will be tariff revision, trusts, economy in the public expense and our policy touching the final dis-position of the Philippine Islands. The Republicans are not united on these issues and the line of cleavage between the Republican factions be ally forming themselves into Roosevelt and anti-Roosevelt factions. In my judgment the strongest man the Demo-crats can nominate is Gen. Francis Marion Cockrell of Missouri, who is now serving his twenty-ninth year in the Senate. He has an arrival the Demothe Senate. He has an unimpeachable record. He in good faith supported Bryan in 1896 and 1900, and was heartin favor of the Chicago and Kansas City platforms. His public record is such that he would be entirely satisfactory to the business interests of the country. He would have the support not only of all Democrats, but finally others. He would have the support not only of all plemocrats, but finally of Republicans as well. His record as a Confederate solder, instead of hurting him in the North, would help him, for thousands of old Union solders would vote for him because he was a braye solder. Gen. INGALLS IN EARNEST

WANTS TO BE PRESIDENT. NEW YORK April 4.— (Exclusive Dispatch.) The Post's Washington corrent says there is no question in there that Melville Ezra Ingalis is in carnes in his intention to become President of the United States, if that is He has not disguised his pur pose to his friends. His willingness to accept the nomination for Mayor of Cincinnati at this particular time, when he is already burdened as much as any man could be with the cares of a big railroad system, is a sign that he believes that a pyschological mo-ment has come, and that he is the man

Mr. Ingalls has always been known to the leadership of a party which makes a point of filtelghing against corporations and large accumiations of capital, as Samuel J. Tilden was in 1876. As a party man, nominated on a re-form platform for such a business office as the mayoralty, and looking to the hard-headed and independent-minded members of both parties for the bulk as the mayoralty, and looking to the hard-headed and independent-minded members of both parties for the bulk of his support, his position is not unlike that of Mr. Cleveland in Buffalo in 1851. If he should be elected, and give the city of Cincinnati a first-rate business administration for the coming few months, it would not surprise any one here to see the offer repeated, which was made him in 1899, of the Democratic nomination for Governor. It was at one time supposed that Tom Johnson of Cleveland would have the first call one time supposed that Tom Johnson of Cleveland would have the first call on the Governorship if the Democraty had any chance of winning, but he has become too seriously involved in a fac-tional fight within his own party to red a factor next fall.

In 1839 Mr. logalis responded to tele-graphic suggestion of his nomination: "It cannot make a political campaign with you. The railroad is good enough for me."

It is not in the least likely under exting conditions, that this answer

PLATT VS. ODELL.

WILL BE FIGHT TO FINISH.

[BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.]

NEW YORK. April 4—[Exclusive blapatch.] The fight between Gov. dell and Senator Platt for the mastery of the Republican State machine is raging furiously and grows flerer day by day. By those who can read aright the significance of the clash between the Republican forces at Albany, can readily be seen which way the advantage of the battle is going.

the advantage of the battle is going.

Boss Platt, for twenty years undisputed master of the Republican machine in this State, has of late been aneered at as dead politically, and a new boss, in the person of the younger, more vigorous Governor, has been acclaimed. But is the "old man" dead? Is the young man at a helm, and, if so, can he stay there, sure of his power, able to repel Platt boarders who may try to drive him off? This week's developments raise an excuse for doubt, and for three special reasons.

Who passed the new liquor-tax law? Odell.

Who defeated the mortgage-tax law?

Who put a joker in Gen. Green's police bill, and beat it by favoring the three-platoon idea, dear to the heart of every one of New York's 7000 policemen? Platt.

And those developments mean much. The first means that every liquor dealer in the State of New York, not in this city alone is today an enemy of Gov. Odell. The political history of this State and others is crowded with the wrecks of men who sought preferment in politics and aroused the opposition of the liquor interests. The saloon is a factor in this State that must be reckoned with on election day. Gov. Odell has ranged those voters solidly against him. When he called those sixteen Assemblymen to him and raised the cry of bribery, he sounded the death knell of the opposi-tion to the bill. He made himself personally responsible for it, but at the same time he put Platt in the position of having been willing to stop the passage of the bill, if he had been able. So Platt had but to sit back and let Odell matter. The "old man" made friends in America, has left Hoboken, it is fumored, for good. She has gone, it lee the rushed to the assistance of his moneyed friends. Corporations were attacked. Platt has been backing them and profiting thereby in campaign years through generously filled war chests. Gov. Odell mad on the subject of taxation and eager to devise ways and means to direct taxes from the backs of the up-State farmers was beat on jamming through the bill.

NEW TORK, April 4.—Mrs. Hetty Green woman for the church that they should look any time now for a period of hardship and financial depression. "In the time of prosperity," he said, "It is highly proper for the Latter Day Saints to get out of debt. And one of the best ways to pay our debts to our business appear in court and tell why she had not paid a license for her dog.

"It will make sure I have no more dog summonses served on me," Mrs. Green is reported to have declared, for I intend telegraphing ahead to the different places I propose visiting in the West informing the authorities if the saints most needed was been on jamming through the bill.

Plat said not on his political life. He railled his strength and he beat the measure. He could do it, for there was no fear of the cry of bribery in this was not a refer to the cry of bribery in this callfornia has never had a candidate for one of the Presidential offices on the Republican ticket, and it is believed that it would be a good thing to gratify the State's ambitions in this regard.

was not are of the cry of bribery in this was not been withing the covernment of the cry of bribery in this president and the covernment of the cry of bribery in this was not been and over the backs of the recalcitrant Assemblymen, and he lost the day. So while the banks and moneyed interests now look on him as their arch enemy, their friend and defender will have his cold time and when still plays his old-time role, and when the time comes to cash up, to give value received, the easy boss will be the one who will handle the campaigr

MUNICIPAL CAMPAIGNS

UNIQUE ISSUE IN CLEVELAND. (BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS-P.M.) CLEVELAND (O.) April 4,—Tonight marked the close of one of the most exciting Mayoralty campaigns in the history of the city. The vote to be cast on Monday will be by far the largest ever recorded in a local mu-nicipal election. The total registra-

Mayor Johnson, renominated by the Democrats, has during his brief cammade no less than sixty nes, many of them in his tent, specches, many of them in his tent, which was moved to a new location nearly every day of his canvass.

Harvey D. Goulder, the Republican nominee, became so hoarse from speaking early in the campaign that he was temporarily compelled to retire. Later, however, he resumed his speech-making, and has addressed meetings in all parts of the city.

The paramount issue of the campaign has been along the line of cheap street-car fare, Mayor Johnson standing for a straight 3-cent fare, with universal transfers. Mr. Goulder, on the other hand, favors an immediate compromise with the street-car companies, on a basis of seven tickets for 25 cents, with universal transfers.

CHICAGO MAYORALTY. CHICAGO MAYORALTY.

CHICAGO, April 4. With the most hotly-contested Mayoraity campaign in Chicago's history practically ended the outcome is uncertain in the opinion of impartial observers. Graeme Stewart, the Reabillion provinces the the Republican nominee, expresses the opinion that there will be practically a Republican landslide. Mayor Harrison adheres to his prediction that he will win by from 25,000 to 30,000.

Anglo-French Rapprochement One of the Possibilities.

Chamberlain Nails a Newspaper Yarn-Oldest English Woman Passes Away.

(BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.) LONDON, April 4 .- [Exclusive Disitch.] Rumor and gossip are doing patch.) Rumor and gossip are doing their best to give extraordinary significance to the movements of King Edward during the next five months. His Majesty's journey to Portugal, the expected meeting with Loubet, the possibility of a visit to the Vatican and the official announcement that, with Queen Alexandra, he will go to Ireland in July or August—these plans have furnished Iondon press with opportunities that rarely occur for speculation.

In the international situation there are elements at work which need Kine Edward's personal aid. Among them are forces making for Anglo-Prench rapprochement. At the pres-downe, for Britain and France are the only European powers who approach it with a primary regard for the inter-ests of civilization. Edward's presence in Lisbon is interpreted by British opinion as signi-fying much more than a polite return of the visit of King Charles to the Court of St. James. Britain looks upon Portugal as one of her oldest and firmest allies. BERLIN POINT OF VIEW

(BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.)
BERLIN, April 4.—[Exclusive Dispatch.] Diplomatists expect important changes in the relations of European countries as a result of the present and forthcoming journeyings of rulers of Germany, England, France and Italy. They interpret Russia's lecture to France in connection with the Balkans as the signal for an extensive shuffling of alliance arrangements. The most tangible forecast concerns Anglo-French rapprochement as a re-sult of the meeting between King Edward and President Loubet

Russia's refusal to support France in Fashoda and Mytilene, on the other hand, has cheapened the value of a dual alliance' in France's eyes, and while the partnership is still unbroken events where Germany will land when the continental political map has been redrawn is more problematical. There are rumors of coalition with Russia, but the Pan-German customs union embedding Austria bracing Austria, Denmark and Hol-land is considered more likely.

ARMED MEN ON STILTS.

Where else in the world could one a sight like this? Four tail men with tulwars and every description of khife in their sashes, mounted on vary long stilts, keeping up with the procession in tremendous strides. The very enthusiastic audience which had been clapping and cheering to a man, since the entrance of Cutch, simply rose and howled to speak rather inclegantly, and amid clapping, "bravos" and shouts of appreciation, the "four armed men on stilts," and all the other giories of the retainers of Cutch, slowly made the circuit of the amphitheater and disappeared from view. His Highness of Jungargh had brought only twenty-five Arab retainers, but such delightful beings, with their straight noses, their keen eyes and their air of tremendous pride and superiority! ice, and the flat plain of the polo ground, three hundred yards in width, was filled by an army in full-dress uniform, each color quite distinct, the mass of red coats next a solid block of dark green; the beautiful tunics of the cavalry and the fawn and white of the khaki and white helmets; and back of all, on another stand, the back of all, on another stand, the bands.

The service litself, which, under cover, would have been impressive beyond words, was a bit disappointing, as the distance was so great that the music of bands and voices was lost. That distance can be better understood when one realizes that it was necessary to signal from the grand stand to the choir at the close of the prayers and beginning of hymns and chants, which was done by a man on horseback who stood with his signal flags in front of the stand.

GUNS OF SOLID GOLD.

The Cackwar of Paroda showed his famous guns of solid gold and silver, mounted on elephants and surrounded by gunners in the native uniform; and so on through the long list of thirty-five of the native States; sach one different, each seemingly more gorgeous than the last. There were gold and silver carriages drawn by small white bullocks with gilded horns and hoofs and with necklaces around their necks; a huge two-story carriage, with latticed, gilded windows and gold standing lamps at each corner, drawn by four very large elephants; another very roomy carriage, drawn by six camels with ropes through their poer noses; a company of eleven camels with guns, or, as the programme had it, "eleven armed camelry."

There were horses which made the whole circuit in leaps, others which danced in regular steps, and one which walked on his hind legs for yards at a time. There was a leaping elephant, poor, clumsy beast—but he did his alloited part to the best of his ability; and there were six men wrapped in snowy chuddahs, standing straight upon their horses. There was an elephant covered with chain armor, very becoming to his dark gray hide, and there were horses with painted legs, bright green or red.

The Maharao Rajah of Bundi, besides five elephants, a most delightful native band and a horse with a kettle drum to add to the weird sounds, had a mounted attendant, gorgeously arrayed, carrying his chief's Ganges water.

Kota was greeted with mad enthusiasm, for his retinue was preceded by fifteen Nagas or military ascetics, who, nearly naked, with long, dirty hair and faces and bodies covered with ashes, struck attitudes, charged at each other with curved blades, and were altogether so wild and unusual that the onlookers were taken by storm.

RACING WAR WAXES WARM

Ready to Attack Tommy Williams on His Northern Ground.

Looloos Won from Portland Again-Pasadena Golfers Victorious.

If Tom Williams, the racetrack coar of San Francisco, persists in his attempt to shut out rucing in Los Angeles, the Los Angeles Jockay Club will "go cashoots" with Williams's 'Frisco enemies and build a track in the northern city as well as one in the morthern city and the work of Southern city and the work of the land of the propert say they want only as own break, and add that if they cannot get that they are prepared to take the agressive and make Williams exceedingly sorry that he assumed the guine of dictator.

Barney Schrefber of St. Louis, one of the biggest race horse men in the country, spent last Sunday in Los Angeles, and it was then that the if-necessary carrying of the war into Africa was mapped out and approved. Prince Ponistowski, Jim Farley and other San Francisco enemies of Williams have obtained an option on a section of land near the Oakiland track. accomplist to both the resirced and street-oar lines, for the building of a rival track. Epes Randolph, John A. Mur and the other promoters of the Assot track will join with Ponistowski and his associates in the building of the Oakiand track unless Williams calls quits and agrees to attend strictly to his own game and let Los Angeles racing proceed without attempted interference from him.

Another point: Williams is not a member of any jockey club, therefore he has no power to bar entries. The Los Angeles Jockey Club proposes, in the event of the carrying on of the Williams fight, to have its representative admitted to the Western association. This done, the Assot people will be able to say that no horses racing under the Williams mannagement shall run on the new tracks at Los Angeles and Oakiand. This, horsemen say, tion. This done, the Ascot people will be able to say that no horses racing under the Williams management shall run on the new tracks at Los Angeles and Oakland. This, horsemen say, would put Williams out of business. The Ascot backers have bought 160 acres of fine land just south of the city limits, between Central and Park avenues, and May 1st ground will be broken for the new course. The construction work will be directed by Architect A. M. Allen of Monterey, who built the Harlem and thever, who built the Harlem and the Ingleside, Tanforan and Oakland tracks near San Francisco. The approved specifications call for two tracks, the outside or main track to be 85 feet wide in the stretch and 89 feet wide at all other points. This will make the Ascot course two feet wider than any other track in the United States.

A grand stand will be built, 234 feet long and with a seating capacity of from 4500 to 5000 persons. Bix hundred stalls, in sections of forty each, double-lined, will be built, with commodious paddocks. Also a modern and comfortably apportioned clubhouse will be erected.

TOOK THIRD GAME.

Los Angeles, 4; Portland, 2.

Mr. Lawler saved his country along about 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon in a pyrotechnic manner, and stimulated in the breasts of the Webfoots from Pertland the fast-growing belief that they might as well quit and go home. A listless game had brought the score to 3-and-3 when Moriey's Loo-locs went to the bat at the beginning of the last half of the ninth inning. Wheeler was first man up. He filed Wheeler was first man up. He flied out to deep center. Then came Lawler and rubbed his hands in the dirt. The first ball that traveled toward the plate looked good to him, and he landed it down in the region of first base, about a foot inside the right foul line, and the sphere brought up against the fence. Smith made a quick recovery and threw to Anderson, and Anderson to Andrews at third, to catch out the flying runner. Lawler sild at third, but the slide was unnecessary, for Smith's throw went wild into the left-bleacher fence, allowing Lawler to complete the circuit

mer. Lawier slid at third, but the slide was unnecessary, for Smith's throw went wild into the left-bleacher fence, allowing Lawier to complete the circuit of the bases. As the latter, almost all in after his terrific run, crossed the plate, the grandstand and the bleachers set up a how! that must have been heard two blocks away.

There was nothing more to it. Los Angeles took the third successive game from Portland, by a score of 4 to 3.

Portland scored the first run, in the first half of the fourth inning. Smith hit to right field for two bases, and Anderson singled to left field, scoring Smith.

Los Angeles decorated the scoreboard with a figure 2 in the same inning. Dillon singled through scoond, Wheeler was given base on balls, and Lawier hit to the right field fence, and Smith's single to center field.

In the eighth inning the visitors tied the score. Van Buren took his base on balls, Shaffer hit to Smith at second balls, Shaffer hit to Smith at second balls, Shaffer safe. Nafeau was hit by a pitched ball and Smith struck dut. Anderson singled to left, and wen to second on Lawier's throw to third hase to stop Nadeau. Samfer score dand with a score of 4 to 2.

Popular Ideas Regarding Catarrh.

It is the common belief that what is popul tends, which means nearly overy part of the body.

The mucous membrane is the inside skin of the body and is nearly as extensive as the cutside skis, and any inflammation of this membrane causing an extra secretion of fluid is really catarrh.

Catarrh is, therefore, an old essemy disquised by many confusing names, for instance: Rhinitis is nased catarrh laryngitis, and pharyngitis froat catarrh; guarritis, stomach catarrh; cystitis and nephyritis, catarrh of the bladder and kidneys.

Therefore, although the lecation of the trouble gives it various names, in reality the sum total is catarrh and nothing clas.

Do not make the mistake of thinking you have no catarrh because the head and nose appear to be clear. If there is a cough tickling in the threat and hourseness you have throat catarrh, if there is no appetits, but names, gagging and disgust for food especially in the morning, you have catarrh of the stomach.

Everybody reads the Erkenbrecher letters, of course. longer ago than last Sunday we set forth the needs of the city, recommending that a larger force of police be appointed; and, lo! within two days' time the city fathers saw fit to appoint seventy-five additional members to the force, ten to be installed at once, balance at intervals during the year.

My! but won't things hum from now on? Over sixteen inches of rain. What do you think of that? It's simply going to be the greatest year California ever had.

Los Angeles, mind you, is the center of all Southern California, where these extraordinary conditions exist -- and she is growing at such a rapid rate that some people say there is danger of "busting her buttons" -- but pshaw! they don't know what they're talking about. Los Angeles is going to keep a-growing.

Just look at that new Chamber of Commerce, for which we must thank our strenuous Secretary, Frank Wiggins -- and the rest of the honorable directors and members. SANTA ANA. BIG GOPHER KILLING.

SANTA ANA. April 4 .- In a big ound-up of gophers near Old Newport odents were killed by a small army of men and boys.

A tract of ninety acres, formerly an old alfalfa patch, but now infested with the little animals, was flooded from the overflow of the Santa Ana River, and the whole place completely inundated. This forced the gophers out of their holes, and the pupils of the Newport schools, who had been dismissed for the occasion, armed with clubs and sticks, knocked the destructive little animals on the head as fast as they made their appearance above ground.

Their carcasses made a huge pile. One boy, unaided, killed more than five hundred, and many of the pupils de-stroyed over two hundred apiece. The heavy rains, by fooding pieces of the lowlands, where the gophers have been gaining headway, for the past few dry years, have destroyed many thousands of them.

50 YEARS OF CONTINUOUS SUCCESS

It was 50 years ago that HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS was first introduced to the public as a family medicine, and its remarkable progress, as it forged its way to the front rank, in spite of all opposition, is one of the wonders of the twentieth century. Its success, however, is attributed to the fact that it is founded on true merit, without which no medicine can hope to succeed. It has therefore stood the test of popularity for half a century and has established a record of cures of STOMACH, LIVER, KIDNEY AND BOWEL DISORDERS unequalled by any other medicines in fact, it has never been know to fail, even in the most severe cases,

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS

Is therefore deserving of a fair trial by everyone suffering from these ailments, and if you will only take our advice, which is backed by prominent physicians throughout the country, you will be thankful afterwards. It will surely cure you. Thousands of persons, today, owe their good health to its use, having been cured by the Bitters after all other remedies had failed. You can therefore safely trust a medicine with such an indorsement. It will

This general distrust of even those he knew to be his friends, is quoted as peculiarly inconsistent with his claimed nearness to God.

He did at one time assent to the suggestion of his most intimate supporters a that he should resign, but before he could execute the promise it is asserted that certain lady members got around him and he revoked it.

Both the adherents and opponents of Mr. Smale say they will unite in presenting him with a handsome purse upon his resignation.

THE CITY IN BRIEF.

BREVITIES.

If you wish to be sure that the hat you wear is the model most popular on Fifth avenue, or the most fashinghed parishan promenades, get a Gollins hat. Miss Collins spares no expense in bringing the most deskirable models of Paris and New York to Lo.

Angeles. This would avail little were it not for the fact that Miss Collins brings the price of these Parishan and New York creations so much below the prices charged by the original designers, that any lady who indules in moderate dress can afford to wear a Collins hat, or one imported by her. Hats ranging from 110 to 118 are guaranteed to possess all the style of original and expensive importations, lacking, of course, some of the elegance in material which make the French productions so expensive. Miss Collins (Darish) and expensive miss colling the artilities of the prices are guaranteed to be much lower than the same goods can be purchased elsewhere. E. C. Collins, 249 S. Broadway.

East Hollywood Tract.

The sale of nine unimproved lots in the East Hollywood tract is reported by Alex Culver for the past week at prices ranging from $250 to $500, and aggregating about $4000. The lots average $50x175 feet. Among the purchases reported are: Four lots, south side of Benefit street, between Vermont avenue and the electric railway line, by Mrs. M. J. Clapper, $1500; three on the south side of Benefit street, between Vermont avenue and the electric railway line, by Mrs. M. J. Clapper, $1500; three on the south side of Benefit street, 100 feet west of Lyman Place, and one on the southwest corner of the streets just named, by F. Broughten, $700. About one-fourth of the lots of the tract have been sold during the past two weeks. The tract is about a mile and three-quarters east of Hollywood, and within the lim; its of a 5-cent fare to the city over the Los Angeles-Pacific Railroad electric line. Several of the lots recently bought are to be improved.

Sunset Boulevard.

It is now nearly two months since the Council let a contract for the grading of Sunset boulevard, from Douglas street to a point near the western city limits. Residents in the northwestern section, who have waited so patiently for this improvement, for ten years or more, are becoming somewhat restless, and would like to know when work is to commence. So far, the East Los Angeles from a social stand-point can hold its own with any part of the city. We have afternoon and and Elysian Park.

A majority of the people in East Los Angeles own their own homes. Many of them are old residents, and not being of speculative and migratory turn of mind, are a contented and genial class of people.

We have five large public school buildings, ten churches and three saloons for a population of 10,000. A a recent meeting of the Police Commission it was decided to abandon the East Side Police Station.

A GOOD PLACE FOR HOMES.

Mrs. R. W. Dromgold of No. 137
North Gates street, writes as follows, in regard to a section of the city that has been much neglected during the past few years:

East Los Angeles seems to be and always has been almost wholly ignored by moneyed men for speculative or home-building purposes, they as a rule preferring the southern and western part of the city.

I have been a resident of Los Angeles for nearly twenty years, and have lived in different parts of the city during which time I have returned to East Los Angeles and built myself a home twice, and I expect to remain here permanently now, for no other reason than that I consider this the healthiest and pleasantest part of the city for a home. The altitude is so much greater than that of the city proper, and especially the southern portion of the city, that I frequently ride from those parts of the city in the evening out of a bank of fog into a clear and bracing atmosphere in East Los Angeles.

Geographically, East Los Angeles lies on one large inclining plain, gradually ascending from the river bed to the large foothilis in the suburbs, there being no small hills with little valleys between in which the storm water accumulates and has to be pumped out by the fire engines, as in some localities. The First Ward has more miles of sewer than any other ward in the city, and although we support an undertaker of our own, he will truthfully tell you that there are fewer deaths in the First Ward than in any other ward in the city. These are matters of record and can be proven. - 41111111 AV' SE'O 20:20

Good residence lots can be bought here for from $500 to $1500.

I feel eafe in saying that less "For sale" signs can be seen in Bast Los Angeles than in any other part of the city of the same size.

I fully recognize the fact that there are many other beautiful and healthful localities in Los Angeles, but to those who are inclined to criticise East Los Los Angeles I kindly offer these explanations.

rainfall of over two inches. We have little or no mud inwinter, and well-sprinkled streets in summer. We have no "flooded" streets or "cars plowing through water" during rainstorms, nor have we any of the much-talked-of "oil nuisance" to contend with.

Hecause of its being wrongfully called "East Los Angeles," strangers naturally presume that we are east of the city proper, and consequently the re-

MONTEBELLO PUBLIC SCHOOL

(The above photograph taken April 3, 1903.)

Dear Sirs; --

Miss Lena Christian, of Norwalk, a graduate of the State Normal School at San Diego, of the class of 1902, is the teacher in

THE PUBLIC SCHOOL OF MONTEBELLO, Which includes the townsite of Newmark; a modern school building, consisting of two rooms, has recently been ERECTED AT A COST OF $4000, And equipped with all the modern appliances. The trustees of the school district are C. Y. Baker, President, D. White and

E. K. Wentz. The progress in building on the townsite has been somewhat delayed by the recent heavy rains, but on the whole is satisfactory. The material has been ordered for

SIX DWELLINGS AND ONE BRICK BLOCK

For the store. The actual work of delivering the material to the sites and the work of construction commenced some days ago. The work is now to be rushed with all possible dispatch. The contracts for building have been canceled by mutual consent of all the parties, and C. Weesner, the manager of construction for the office, hereafter will have exclusive charge of the work. Newmark has

PERTILE LANDS AND ABUNDANT WATER,

Its own overland railroad, its own depot, its own agricultural, horticultural and other resources. Newmark is more than a subdivision, it is a business center;

ITS PUTURE AS A BUSINESS CENTER

Is as certain as Pssadena or Whittier. By reason of its climate, educational facilities, natural scenery and nearness to to the center of Los Angeles, it is the ideal place for homes, none more so in all California. Yours sincerely, JAMES R. COLLINS. To A. J. Cribling, Geo. W. Kellogg, Mrs. R. Logan and others, recent purchasers of lots in Montebello Subdivision, Newmark, California.

Convention Hall Committees.

Plans Accepted.

The plans previously submitted for the two-story brick building for the city water department were adopted by the Water Board last week and the superintendent was directed to advertise for bids for its erection. It is to be used principally as a workshop and general depot of supplies, with sheds and stables in the rear. The extensions of the water system, which the increase of population and the addition of new subdivisions will necessitate during the next few years will undoubtedly be considered. It is gratifying, therefore, to be able to note the systematic preparations that are being made to supply this demand.

PLANS MORE AMALGAMATION. (BY DIRECT WIRE TO THE TIMES.)
NEW YORK, April 4.—[Exclusive Mepatch.] It was said today that changes are soon to be made in the office management of some of the sub-sidiary companies of the Standard Oil Company, with the object of reducing operating expenses. Instead of the various companies separately selling tack-own brands of illuminating oil. es is now the case, it is said that there will be one main sales office for all the companies, and a consequent reduction in the various staffs.

Each of the subsidiary companies manufacturing illuminating oil has its own popular brands, which have become known through usage, but all brands might be sold under one name, as the quality of the all according to test uality of the oil, according to test, practically the same. A few days is practically the same. A few days ago, when buyers attempted to purchase several brands manufactured by one of the largest companies in the trust, they were told that these brands are now handled by another company, and this is believed to be the forerunner of a further amaigamation of effice interests. If in simplifying the sales methods, the company finds that it has a number of superfluous clerks, it is thought that the veterans will be allowed to take advantage of the reis practically the same. silowed to take advantage of the recently-established pension system.

P. M. Rhodes says: "Although I am but a newcomer in Southern California I want to say something to the people about the necessity of a good big convention hall. A year ago I came to this city from Massachusetts, and while living in that State I came to know Los Angeles through its popularity as a city for public gatherings. People who visited the N.E.A. sessions here praised it immeasurably—and regretted only the poor accommodations for their convention. Musicians from my part of the country, notably a number connected with the Worcester Festival Association, spoke of it as a possible music center—and also regretted that the city had no great festival auditorium.

"And so it goes; certain pessimists to the contrary, I believe that the news of the new convention hall will be halled with delight all over the East, and that eventually Los Angeles will become the convention city par excellence.

"To be sure, it's all the way across

lence.
"To be sure, it's all the way across the continent, but in these days of swift locomotion, people had rather travel out of the country they know and get into unusual surroundings, where everything will be new, and the total effect like a trip to some foreign country."

Hiram Jeffrey, dealer in farm and agricultural implements, has found that good rains bring quick returns in Southern California. He said yesterday afternoon: "I suppose everybody knows that rain always brings good results to us sooner of later; but to the hardware dealer they almost always come sooner. I have never seen such good trade as we have had in farm implements since the March rains, I suppose that this is general, and if it is, all classes are benefited.
"Men who usually come in for a few repairs and some of the smaller articles used on farms and in orchards have given orders for whole sets of the more expensive tools this year. One old fellow, who to my knowledge has bought teeth for the same walking harrow for five years, has this year purchased an up-to-date disc riding machine. And this the way it goes. gricultural implements, has found of Sherer & Co.'s foreman is likely to develop into one of the several mysterious cases which have puzzled the police this season.

A Coroner's inquest was held at Bresee Bros.' morgue yesterday morning, but absolutely nothing new was told by the witnesses. James Cummings, a brother of the victim, and Police Officer Murphy were the witnesses. Cummings discovered the bady of his brother, and Murphy was the first officer on the scene. They agreed as to the facts brought out so far,

W. Maynard Smith of the firm of Smith Bros., real estate operators, believes that the best possible thing that could happen to Southern California, in a business way, would be the building of some such town as the suggested "New Dolgeville."

Said Mr. Smith: "We are living in an age preeminently commercial, and however much one may fancy climate and artistic natural advantages, in the day in which we find ourselves none of these can take the place of commercial and manufacturing enterprises on a large scale. Los Angeles needs just this very thing to make it the unrivaled city of the West.

"T believe that could one industry be established here on a firm and paying basis it would send prices booming. And this would be no mere inflation, either. Large colonies of the infustrial class would settle up districts which are now sparsely inhabited; mill owners and operators would spend great sums on residences for themselves, and the town would wear an entirely different, aspect. It the Dolge-Huntington attempt is a success it will pave the way for many such undertakings, and will make us a truly great city."

P. M. Rhodes says: "Although I am Police Officer Murphy were the with evited the with collection of the scene. They agreed as to the facts brought out fast officer on the scene. After describing the wounds Dr. Campbell said that their appearance indicated that they had been inflicted with a dull weapon. According to this, the murderer used only the pick handle found under a side of the house in which Cummings was killed. The jury returned a verdict in accordance with the facts brought out at the laquest deciding that "Thomas Cummings had come to his death at the hands of a person or persons unknown to the jury, by being beaten over the head with a dull weapon." McDonald, husband of the woman with whom Cummings spent the hours of Thursday night, just preceding his murder, has not been found. It is thought that he left town, but so far he has not been connected with the murder by any one thoroughly conversant with the facts. Still, it is admitted the heavy know something of it.

There was not the same certainty yesterday as existed Friday, that the motive of the murder was jealousy. Some of the detectives are willing to admit that the murderer might have entered the shack of the boss teamster to commit robbery. The general opinion, however, has not changed, and those who have studded the case most closely, believe that the murderer was been to paying a grudge.

Alarm for Steamer Newsboy in San Francisco, but Vessel Wasn't Due There Before Last Night.

Word reached this city last evening from the Marine Exchange at San Francisco that the freight and pas-senger steamer Newsboy sailed for San Francisco from San Pedro for San Francisco from San Pedro last Tuesday and is overdue and no information of her can be obtained. The Newsboy carried thirty-two passengers, fourteen first class and eighteen steerage. Efforts to obtain the list of the passengers last evening failed, the local agent referring the inquirers to the agents, Gray & Co. of San Francisco.

Report comes from San Pedro that the Newsboy was to have sailed Tuesday, but did not get away until Wednesday night, so she was probably due in San Francisco last night. There is no apprehension at San Pedro for the vessel or passengers, both being considered safe, and likely to reach port any hour.

the truth in regard to diseases of men. That's why they cure, and why they are the only methods that can soundly and thoroughly cure. It may be that you have been treated by numerous doctors and have received nothing more than temperary relief, or, perhaps, in some instances you received no relief whatever. That isn't evidence that your case is incurable. It is evidence that the treatment was inadequate and did not remove the cause of your trouble. Strong tonics, for instance may have a stimulating effect in cases of so-called weakness. For a time there may be promising indications of complete restoration of all the functions, or the patient may even believe himself cured. Then the effect of the dosing passes away and the weakness is greater than before, because the exciting influence of the remedies has aggravated the condition of which the weakness is a symptom. You can readily I say the things that I know. I leave unsaid the things that I am not absolutely certain about, or lse I express the uncertainty in saying them. I feel that I am qualified to speak knowingly upon all medical subjects. I feel that I have a right to speak empathically in regard to the diseases and disorders that constitute my specialty. The diplemas that have been awarded me by the best medical colleges and hospitals in the world are ample evidence of my qualification as a physician. My sixteen years' experience in curing diseases of men has given me a knowledge of this line of aliments that enables me to make direct and definite statements, and it enables me to prove to you that my statements are founded upon fact and are correct.

I say that you can be cured. I stand ready to back up this statement with proof. I ask you to call at my effice and talk with me about it. Examination and consultation will cest you nothing, and I will explain to you something about my methods of curing. The methods I will tell you about are unlike those employed by any other doctor. They are, in their chief essentials, methods of my own devising. They are founded upon a knewledge of feel that I am qualified to speak knowingly upon of which the weakness is a symptom. You can readily understand that such treatment could not possibly cure, and that its failure to cure isn't the slightest in-dication that your case cannot be cured when treated rightly. I promise you a different treatment; a treat-ment that corrects the conditions responsible for the weakness and demonstrates the truth of my statement that you can be cured.

Even today when little Denmark is comparatively prosperous, his salary is only half a million dollars a year, and he has no private fortune to speak of. That is scarcely a pittance compared with the income of all the other European monarchs of the first rank. It is, however, a noble sum compared with what the family used to have in the days before 1852, when the present King was formally declared Crown Prince of Denmark and given the author, King, then practically unknown, took the part and in it made his first real bid for fame.

The bad Henry Arthur Jones having had his turn with "The Lackey's Carnival" and "The Princess's Nose," the good Henry Arthur Jones now comes up smiling with "Whitewashing Julia," produced by Arthur Bourchier at the Garrick. A certain charming Julia has been in some sort of a morganatic matrimonial mess with a Duke, and there have been racy whisperings about it, so that when she comes back to England her old friends in a fashionable country town cut her. By wit, tact, good will and good luck she wins the battle with them, without ever telling them what they try, throughout three acts, to learn, viz: Exactly what happened in that affair with the Duke. She captures the brother of the premier grande dame of the place and offers to tell him the whole story—realing it, and all ends well the reading it, and all ends well.

Now, the funniest thing about it all is the attitude of the public toward this play. The people in front of the footlights grow as eager to know what that little burled episode in Julia's life really was as are the lovely Julia's fellow-townsfolk on the stage, and when the curtain comes down without any explanation of that mystery they leave the theater in high dudgeon, to judge by written and spoken criticism. With a skill worthy of the author of "The Liars," the playwright has filled the plece to the brim with wit and enter-tainment. There is not a dull line in it, or a situation that isn't alive with dramatic interest.

A Kiss Amiss.

The drama, "The Night Refuge," by Maxime Gorky, lighted such enthusiasm in a Moscow woman that it entangled her in an adventure, from which the police court alone extricated her.

She saw a man she supposed was the famous author, promenading the streets with his spouse, rushed to the unsuspecting man and saluted him—with a warm kiss, exclaiming: "Great Maxime Gorky! Let me kiss the author of the touching drama, "The Night Refuge."

The worthy citizen was not averse to being taken for Maxime Gorky in this enthusiastic fashion, but his wife was, and proceeded to express her dissatisfaction by an energetic use of her umbrella. Whereupon the three persons were invited to the Folice Court to explain themselves.

FASHION TABLOIDS

Brown New York CORRESPONDENT

Plainness and simplicity from the standpoin of dress, are qualities of the past. Everythin now is ornate and all the old devices such a shirrisse, quillings, rufflings and pioings are back again and more complex, if possible, than ever.

Cords, tassels and danglers are much used in the trimming of Spring coats. And the linings are as pretty and dainty as the coats themselves.

It is considered smarter for the short jack-ets to hang plain, without please. Deep col-lars of lace—so deep that they seem more like capes than collars are fashionable and are made square or round, but always with pointed ends in front.

Of styles in sleeves there's assuredly no end And hardly eny two alike. One point is in sisted upon, and that' is that they all lie as fally as possible at the top. For the rest, the bottoms may bulge in transparent puffs, which seem monatrously big in comparison with this close section, or they may flow loosely, or simply simulate these effects with some clever device.

Cuffs wide and narrow, from mousquetaire length and shape to narrow wristhands widths, are prevalent, but the wide cuff is the mot popular. Uversieeves with filmy undersieeves will sprobably be as much seen as ever during the coming summer.

GOOD STORIES FOR CHILDREN---By Walt McDougall

A TALE of How the Moon Men Were Foiled in Their Effort to Kidnap a Group of Boys, by One Who Was Imposed on by Others

HIS is the story of how a poor, weak, sickly boy became the owner of the finest museum in all the world, after being a giant him-

Douglas Hawtrey Godard was the name of this boy, who was feeble and timid and unable to join in the rough play of the other boys, so most of his lime was spent in study. He knew many languages, and there was not a word that he couldn't spell or a place in the geography he couldn't decribe. But what he wanted most—to play with other boys—was denied him because they refused to play with so small and weak a lad. They drove him away with sharp, cutting words, and told him to go and play with girls or learn to do knitting, called him "bow-legs" and "scare-cat" and refused to let him even stand around when they played.

One fine day in May, Oscar Lipton, Amos Holmook, Frank Delano, Raymond Foster and Herman Wirz were spinning tops in a vacant lot, when Douglas came limping along and stopped to look at hem.

"Get along out o' here!" cried Frank Delano, a big, brawny boy with a large Adam's apple. "Go play over at the kindergarten!"

"Yes!" shouted Amos Holbrook, who already had khaved once and had a pair of fists like a black-smith's. "Chase yourself! We don't want no spindle-shanked kids around here!"

"That's right!" added Herman Wirz, who could lift fifty-six pounds with one finger. "Sneak! Swim out, or you'll get hurt in the push. This ain't no place for kids, anyhow!"

They looked so fierce that Douglas was alarmed and withdrew a few yards; but the other boys, resenting even his presence in the lot, moved off in a body, casting back at him sour and fierce glances. Douglas, however, in spite of many rude remarks, followed them at a distance, resolved to see what they were about to do, as small boys often do, you know, and even when they went as far as the river, where he had never been before, he still clung to them.

"Saw" exical Raymond Foster "haven't you any "Say!" cried Raymond Foster, "haven't you any sense at all? Can't you see we don't want you tag-ging along? Now, just mosey out quick, or you'll get a swift poke on the nose that'll give you the heartburn. See?" heartburn. See ?"

Douglas was about to retreat, when suddenly Oscar cried:

"Here's a funny red berry! I wonder if it's

HE ATE SOME STRANGE BERRIES

All the boys gathered around a small bush bearing pale pink berries, but as they had never seen any before like them they asked Douglas what they were, because they knew he had studied everything. He could not tell the name of the berry, and so, angered at having asked him, they compelled the or weak child to eat all of the berries at once, poor weak child to eat all of the thinking to make him sick, although they knew they might be poisonous, but the hard-hearted lads did not care for that.

Now, these were mammoth berries, which blossom and ripen on but one day in the year, the 9th of May, and they disappear in an hour, so very few people except wizards, witches and botanists ever find them at all. They have the marvelous power of making one who eats them grow suddenly and unexpectedly, at any moment, to an enormous size. Therefore they are called mammoth berries. It was fortunate, although so dangerous, that the boys made Douglas eat them all, as you will see. Any one of the lads would willingly have eaten them had he known their magic powers; but as it was, the weakest and smallest got them. After he had swallowed every one the boys drove him away with jeers and gibes. They were standing in threatening attitudes facing him as they ordered him to go, and none of them saw a very remarkable object in the air. It was a thing shaped like an immense eigar, that was moving slowly along over the water toward them—a sort of an airship, but unlike any ever seen before. It was filled with queer, dwarfish, hairy men, with large, misshaped heads that looked more like those of fish than human heads, and all of them were glaring eagerly at the group of boys on the shore.

The airship came nearer and nearer swiftly and bilently, and then suddenly darted down upon them. As the startled boys turned to see what was coming the fishlike men poured out of the car and grabbed them, each lad being seized by several fish-men at once, and so powerful were the fish-men that even the burly Amos was perfectly helpless in their

Like so many bags the boys were tossed into the car, the fish-men sprang in after them, and up shot the airship. Douglas, although the smallest, was the first to recover his senses, and he looked at the fish-men carefully.

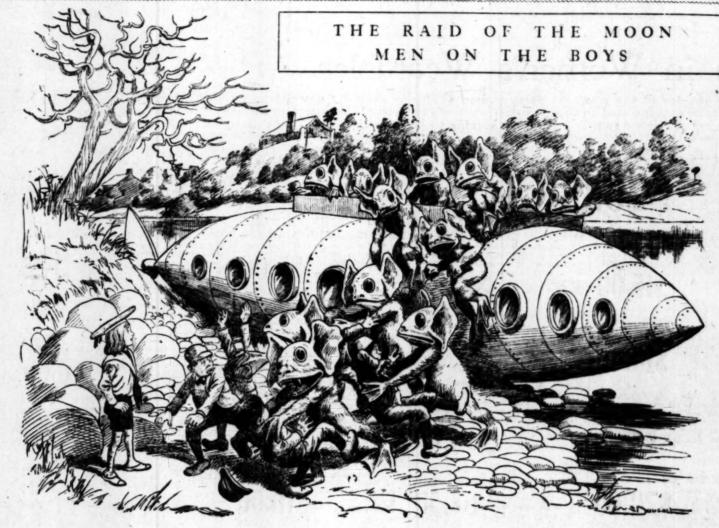

He soon saw that they were not real men, or rather not men of this world, for no such human beings have ever been seen on earth. With crooked, short legs, long, thick arms, covered with red hair; no fingernails nor teeth, yet very fierce and savage, their heads, with their enormous red eyes, made them seem terrible indeed. They talked together in a strange language, and it was easy to see that were conversing about their captives, for now and then they turned their awful red eyes upon the boys, all of whom were in the utmost terror.

The airship shot upward so swiftly that it was as invisible as a bullet fired from a gun, and thus as invisible as a bullet fired from a gun, and thus in an hour or so Douglas saw they were approaching the moon. Then he knew where the men had come from. They were moon men, and in their airabip had swooped down upon the earth after victims. He imagined that he now could guess where all the people go who so mysteriously disappear every day from their homes. They are caught by moon men, are carried to the moon and never return. He never expected to see his home again, and he wondered whether the moon men eat their captives or make slaves of them.

But he did not learn this then, for just about that

But he did not learn this then, for just about that time he suddenly began to grow bigger and bigger, so that in a few minutes he half-filled the great car and threw the moon men into extreme alarm, for such a spectacle they nor anyone else had ever seen. The idea of a man suddenly becoming a giant before The idea of a man suddenly becoming a giant before one's eyes scared the boys, too, almost out of their senses, but Douglas remembered that he had once read about "diminishing berries" in one of my own stories, and he rightly guessed that the berries he had caten must have the very opposite effect. He whispered this to Amos Holbrook, and as he had perhaps more sense than the others he, too, concluded that it was the right solution. Douglas grew larger and larger until all the rest were owded to the sides of the car, and then, seeing that all the moon men were paralyzed with fear, he picked up their captain by the back of the neck and commanded him to turn the car back to the earth. To his surprise, the moon man understood him, hav-ing probal : learned English from some former captive, and he reversed the direction of the air-ship at once, for, without thinking, Douglas had held him over the side.

"Chuck 'em all overboard!" said Oscar. "Let's see if they'll break into pieces before they reach the earth!"

"Yes!" cried Frank. "Fire one at that cloud be-low there, and see him puncture it. I'll bet you can't hit it the first time!"

can't hit it the first time!"

"No." said Douglas. "I will save them, for I think I can use them when we get back. I will bet they have captured lots of people, and I'll make them tell what they've done with them."

"When we get back we will torture them," said Raymond. "Then they'll confess."

"Yes!" cried Douglas. "You'll do a lot! I'd like to leave you alone with one of them and see what you'd do. I guess you'd holler for me to come and help you pretty quick! You talk big now. It's a wonder I don't get back at you all, now that I've got a chance, for abusing me and calling me names!"

names!"

He looked so terrible as he said this, and so awfully enormous that all the boys felt a chill of fear go through them, for, after all, they felt that they deserved punishment indeed for their eruelty. Now they had to depend upon the once frail and weak lad whom they had called "spindle-shanks" for their very lives, as, if he left them for an instant, the moon men would have attacked them promptly. So they ceased to make suggestions to Douglas, for they did not know that he was only joking.

He turned to the leader of the moon men and told him that he must at once instruct him in the art of managing the airship, and the captain, of course, instantly showed him how it was done.

The ship was moved through the air by means of an apparatus that shut off or turned on in an the power of gravitation, which, you know, is what makes things fall to the ground, and the absence of which would allow everything to the off into the air like so many rockets. The machine controlled this mysterious force, about which no one on earth knows the least thing, and the airship moved, by means of a tiny button, anywhere the man behind the button wished to go.

Douglas learned all about it in twenty minutes because he was very smart and learned in all sorts of things, from electricity to vermiform appendices. so he told the captain to go away back and sit down while he ran the ship. Then he steered her in all directions, although he found it rather hard to press the button, as his finger was awfully large. He covered not only the button, but the large dial that showed the course of the airship. Still, he found that he could manage the ship easily, and then he that he could manage the ship easily, and then he turned her earthward again, and in another hour turned her earthward again, and in another hour they were hovering over the world. They could see all the oceans and continents, all the capes, isthmuses and peninsulas just as plainly as if it were a colored map spread below them, and it was a wonderful lesson in geography.

But just where they were pointing was a land that he had never read much about, because people from outside are never allowed to enter it. This was the land of Thibet, and, although filled with great mountains, it was adorned with marvelous cities built of pearl, ivory and silver.

This particular part of Thibet is called Biff, and is a land that no stranger has ever even heard of, still less thought of visiting. It is away behind the times, of course. The people of Biff have never heard of photograwhs, telephones, automobiles, carpet sweepers, canned goods or bicycles, so you may imagine what an excitement was created by the sight of an airship. sight of an airship

They shouted in alarm. Some fled to the cellars, others into caves or crawled under beds or covered themselves with rugs, hoping to escape the eye of terrible thing coming nearer every moment.

But as he stood transfixed with fear he looked up and saw the boys staring down at the city, with its beautiful gardens and houses of ivory, pearl and silver. He recognized them as mortals, or at least resembling human beings, and concluded that they were angels, so he resolved to put on a brave front, as become a Gazaab of Biff, and, standing up, he made a most profound bow. Douglas called out:

"Good morning, sir! What is this place?"

"This," replied the Gazaab, "is Biff, a town of Thibet, as you are doubtless aware, and are only

"Far be it from me," replied Douglas, "to guy so reverend and noble appearing an old gentleman so you. Are you used to having airships here?"
"Is that an airship?" cried the Gazanb in astonishment. "I've read about them, but I thought they looked like balloons!"
"You this kind," replied Douglas, "This are well."

looked like balloons!"

"Not this kind," replied Douglas. "This one was made in the moon, and I're a load of the most comical-looking moon inhabitants in here that you ever saw. I'll show you one."

He reached down, picked up the captain and held him out for the ruler of Biff to examine. The Gazaab was even more amazed at the sight of the moon man than he had been at the ship or the giant Douglas.

man than he had been at the saip or the giant Douglas.

Then he dropped the airship gently into the Gazaab's back garden, where the people couldn't come rubbering around and fool with its machinery when they got over their alarm, and all of the boys jumped out, but Douglas tied every one of the moon men with cords, so that they could move neither hand nor foot.

They set up the most peculiar cries, something like young puppies, for they imagined that they

The ruler of Biff, who is called the Great Gazaah, soon heard the outery, and hurried from his ivery palace to see what was happening in his usually se-

Of course Douglas could not enter the palsing eleven feet high already, so his lunch we outside, but now and them he looked in up boys to see how they were behaving.

Soon the Gazaab came out, for he found mone of the other boys could speak Thibeta he began to ask all manner of questions of Dowho had learned the language a few years have he he hought of being a missionary. DEATH OF THE GLOSBARY

"I'll bet I can cover fifty," replied proudly. This was quite likely, as by this was twenty-seven feet in height and broad

Many of the so-called choruses are a madrigate form, kent short and vividious aura parity by the people, part by the disciples. It is especially impressive because he whole work is written for double thoruses both singing the harmony of the chorales, accompanied by the instruments, while the congregation and the struments, while the congregation and the struments. A TOUCHING CHORUS.

Each chorus has its own orchestra and its own organ accompaniment. At the performance in the St. Thomas Church, the most celebrated singers from all parts of the world are engaged to perform the solos: There are about two hundred and fifty instruments playing, and the choir consists of about four hundred woses. The strain of the choir consists of about four hundred woses. are about two hundred and fifty instruments playing, and the choir consists of about four hundred voices. The double orchestra is composed of oboes, flutes and stringed instruments. As Bach's work requires more sweetness and expression of tone than power, noisy instruments like those of brass and drums are entirely avoided. Every lietener has the feeling that the music, in every slightest degree, expresses sorrow. There is not one chorus of rejoicing to be heard, not one paean of praise. While many of Bach's oratorios close with a glorious 'hallelujah,' his "Matthew Passion' has none.

ander the cross, and they can be show the sponge with the vinegur is given to the Saviour, and hear the penetrating cry: "Ell! Ell! Lama abachthani!" that is to gay, "My God! My God! Why hast Thou forsaken me?" But of the greatest overwhelming effect is the music describing verse 69. "Jesus, when He had cried again with a loud voice, yielded up the ghost." At this solemn moment there is no eye tearless. It is a fact that hundreds of people have been so impressed that they became real Christiaus. I have seen men and women full on their knees, folding their hands in prayer and robbing loudly.

It is just as powerful in its effect when the music depicts verses 51 and 52 of the same chapter. Distinctly to be heard is the rending of the veil of the temple from top to bottom, and the frightful noise of the earthquake and bursting of the rocks. During this mysterious representation by the many different instruments one needs but very little fancy to imagine why the graves were opened and "many bodies of the saints, which slept, arose" and came out of the graves after His gresurection and went into the Holy City and appeared unto many."

Words cannot tell how soothing is the following recitative for bass, which seems to have been created for the purpose of filling all hearts with peace again, after they have been penetrated with that dreary excitement for the beloved dead on the cross: "An Abend, da mein Heiland ruht" (at eventide, when my Savior rests.)

Again there is another beautiful choral, when Christ's d'sciples sing: "An Deinem Grab wir sitzen weinerd" (Around Thy tomb here sit we weeping.) During the performanc of this choral one can imagine the whole scene at the grave, and the music dies away as in a sweet sumber song of unspeakable beauty.

I close by quoting Mr. Dwight's own words regarding the end of the work when it was performed at the Triennial Festival of the Handel and Haydn Society in Boston. In no way can the feelings of all those who have heard Sach's "Matthew Passion" be better expressed. He writ

The gloves are, if anything, more numerous than the slippers. They are made of the finest white wool, embroidered with pearls.

The wool for the gloves, and for all the garments of the Pope into which wool enters, is the product of a special fock of sheep dedicated for the purpose by a family who have had the special privilege of supplying the Pontiffs with wool since the sixteenth century. For Constipation.

I Will Return Your Money if This Great Remedy Does Not Do All That is Claimed for It.

There is but one remedy known to medical science that will permanently cure Constipation. There is no other medicine for which such a claim is made. Numberless have been the attempts of medical men and others to perfect a remedy which would quickly relieve and permanently cure the Constipation habit. The result with one exception has been failure. The trouble was in the method of treatment. All remedies now known with this one exception are cathartics and laxatives. They physic the patient, but in doing so they weaken the body. Physics will pull you down-continue their use and you will lose flesh and strength. Mull's Grape Touic is not a patent medicine. Its formula is the same as the famous

"Traubenkur" of Germany, or grape cure. It is prescribed by physicians everywhere and long ago demonstrated that it would quickly and positively cure Constipation. It is not a physic but a strengthening, blood-making, health-giving tonic which exerts a strong and beneficial influence over the organs of the alimentary canal. Mull's Grape Tonic will not physic a well person. It is only indirectly that it will move the bowels; it does that by giving such strength to the digestive organs as will enable them to properly perform their functions. The result is quick. Everyone knows something of the phenomenal growth of this grand winter and summer resort that has come so rapidly to take first place among the seaside resorts on the Pacific; but unless you make a visit to Ocean Park and note the almost magic changes that are taking place here, you will fail to fully appreciate the real conditions, There are about sixty houses now building. This company is still selling lots at the original prices and within sixty or ninety days will have closed out what remains of the original tract. What other beach can say as much? How to be Healthy and Beautiful By Mrs. Henry Symes.

The Use of Paints and Cosmetics May be Favored by Good Women Now, as in All Other Ages, but Their Use is Not Approved conclude that I applaud or approve their usage, except for professional women and in exceptional cases where art can overcome natural defects or simulate a freshness where a faded face means unhappiness, negict or loss of position.

It is perfectly useless for any one to take the stand that paints and powders or the use of them betoken depravity and wickedness. Women have painted their chesks and blackened their eyes and whitened their moses since time began, so far as I can learn.

And I may claim to know something about it, as I have probably read as much on the subject and studied more than the average person concerning the origin and use of cosmetics.

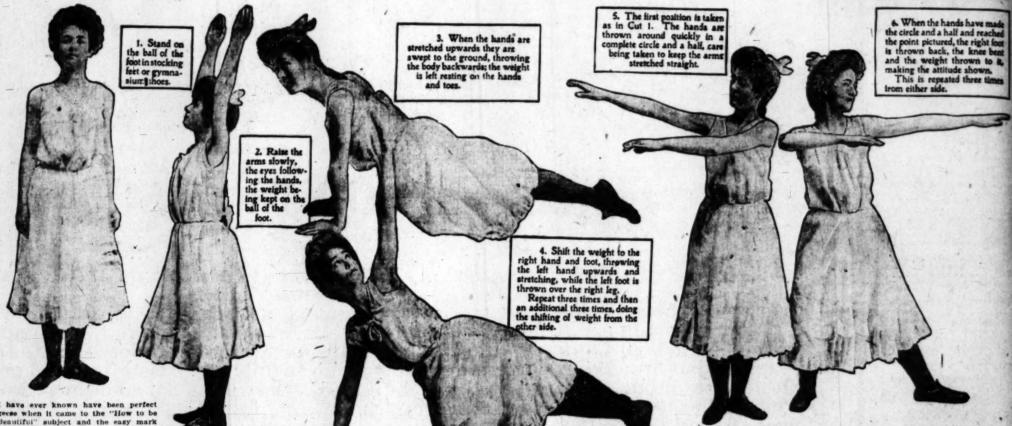

A good many women, and about a thousand times as many men as women, regard paints and powders as the direct invention of his Satanic Majesty.

I have been told a countiess number of times that no good woman ever painted her face or bleached her hair.

"A woman," says my ford and master man—"who will paint her face will do anything. I wouldn't trust her from here to the corner."

Do not let it get near your hair or eyes, as it will certainly bleach the eyebrows and eyelashes wherever it may touch them. Your question about the brush has been answered by post, which is the only way I can answer such queries.

Of course, these fine red lines in an otherwise not had complexion are very noticeable and detracting. They are not caused by any temperate, but have done much articular work at times.

You can have the distended veinstread and the nose restored to a normal condition. The treatment would require a surgical operation, which consists in cutting off the supply of blood from these abnormally dilated veins. It is very simple, and if performed by a skillful hand there is no danger.

WHAT IS THE MATTER WITH AMERICAN WOMEN'S COMPLEXIONS?

American beauties who have good complexions," said an English specialist of international practice, the other day, "but as a rule the American beauty's complexion is far inferior to that of her English cousts. Too many American girls have brown leathery skins, because they do not know what to eat or how to eat it. No women in the world have complexions so beautiful, and needing nothing from art, as the average Englishwoman possesses, because no woman eats so well and so sensibly but I am sorry to say that they are following bad examples, which, if persisted in, will surely destroy their natural peerless beauty. One of the very worst is that of taking several cups of tea daily. I do not object to a cup of tea in the afternoon as a 'refresher,' but no lady who values her complexion should exceed that quantity or ever take tea at meals. It is noticeable that there has been a distinct falling off in recent years in that rich, healthy bloom which gives the English complexions, and there is no beverage in the world so bad for the digestion as tea. "But the marked inferiority of the American complexions is net due to tea drinking, however much tea may be a contributory cause. It is due to a want of knowledge of what to eat. You will easily understand this if you compare the average longlish menu with the American one. To begin with breakfast—the English girl's diet is usually eggs and bacon, plain boiled eggs, or fish with toast or breat and butter, and, if she be wise, no tea or coffee, which both prevent diges-

TATHEN KING EDWARD IS ENTERTAINED

WHAT IT COSTS WHEN ROYALTY COMES TO YOUR HOUSE,

A Little Matter of a Hundred Dollars a Day for Servants-He Brings Cigars elf, but Nothing More-Better Do Some Thinking Before He Comes.

The unfortunate illness of the King, which caused the visit to chatsworth to be postponed, brings to mind the enormous cost which has to be borne by entertainers of royalty.

A week-end visit from King Edward, if he were on your visiting list, would cost you just about £5000, exclusive of special entertainment. That is the regular average cost of a three days—wist such the King of Edward is the regular average cost of a three days—wist such the King of Edward is the regular average cost of a three daysvisit, and the King of England is the least costly—though the most difficult—of all royal visitors to entertain. This is because of his personal tact and consideration, for he does not care to put a friend and subject to too great expense. Foreign sovereigns are much more expensive, and the recent visit that the Kaiser paid to Lord Lousdale, lasting a week, cost something like 225,000.

To begin with, you must not invite

To begin with, you must not invite the King. He is supposed in theory to be able to take or leave whatever he chooses. All that even the most powerful and friendly peer can do is to hint at the delight he would have in entertaining his sovereign, and later the King announces his intention of staying with his subject for a day or two-which he never does unless certain he is welcome in every way, and that the King announces his intention of staying with his subject for a day or two-which he never does unless certain he is welcome in every way; and that his host's banking account will not be hurt by the expense. The first necessity of the hoat is to practically referred by the expense. The first necessity of the hoat is to practically referred his heroes shall be new. Every inch of wall paper, and paint, and gidling must be aftered, and renewed, and an order given to a hig firm of furnishers—generally Massis. Warings of London—to returnish at once in their very best style. This will cost from 25000 to 25000. Very often the whole house is redecorated, too, but in any case the royel suite must be. Then the whole staff of servants, from chief butler to kitchenmaids and stable boys, have to have new liveries, which are not to be worn till the time of the king's arrival, and this means anything from £200 to £500. Only a famous chef can be given charge of the kitchen, and the usual cook gives place to a French "artist," whose salary is from £50 to £100 a week. Usually the chief carriage that meets the King has to be a new one; and costs another £200 at least.

Generally the country house is some way from a telegraph office, and it is an absolute rule that a special telegraph wire must be laid at once from the nearest one, and in the house an instrument is fitted up. This usually costs from £100 to £200, and cannot be dispensed with, as it is important that the King may be in instant touch with any important event, such as the death of a foreign monarch, or any big affair, for a royal slight in such a case is very grave, and the King sends his condolences at once. He takes with him everywhere his private telegraphist, who has charge of the special wire. Then, as to the fare of the house, you cannot give the King what you like, however costly and excellent it is. Lord Knollys King Edward's private secretary, writes to the host, giving the smallest details of everything required, and ah the King's bedchamber at 5 a.m.

Miss Agnes Miller, of Chicago, speaks to young women about dangers of the Menstrual Period — how to avoid pain and suffering and remove the cause by using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

"To Young Women:—I suffered for six years with dysmenorrhea (painful periods), so much so that I dreaded every month, as I knew it meant three or four days of intense pain. The doctor said this was-due to an inflamed condition of the uterine appendages caur by repeated and neglected colds.

"If young girls only realized how dangerous it is to take cold at this critical time, much suffering would be spared them. Thank God for Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, that was the only medicine which helped me any. Within three weeks after I started to take it, I noticed a marked improvement in my general health, and at the time of my next monthly period the pain had diminished considerably. I kept up the treatment, and was cured a month later. I am like another person since, I am in perfect health, my eyes are brighter, I have added 12 pounds to my weight, my color is good, and I feel light and happy."—Miss Agnes Miller, 25 Potomac Ave., Chicago, Iil.

Just One Week Before Easter,

Easter Sunday is the arbiter of fashions for the season and every woman wants to look her best; but nowhere can she spend money so judiciously in making Easter purchases of wearables as at Hamburger's—the representative department store of Southern California. But few stores of the larger Eastern cities carry so great a stock of worthy merchandise. Never anything old, never anything of inferior quality; never anything overpriced. So in these few days act on our suggestions as evidenced by our advertisements, for we have what we advertise, and sell for less what others advertise

O BE CONSIDERED. SOME THIS

n to accept the fact that in uch thing as chance, and to would be wise their lives there is h bear in mind that each man is the architect of his own future. If we all had the strength and courageous determination of a Napoleon, and could say with him, "Circumstances! I make rrcumstances!" we should not be so apt to assume that any lack of realized success is wholly the fault of the plan upon which society is constructed, instead of a certain lack of efficiency on the part of individuals.

One serious reason of failure is that we have any number of men in every community who go through life without any well-defined purpose, save that of doing as small an amount of work as is consistent with making a living-men whose thoughts hardly go out beyond the twenty-four hours of a single day, and who are content if for those hours they are comfortably fed and housed. The difficulty with many, it must be con-ceded, is that they never put forth their powers and energies to the utmost to help themselves, but are content to worry along with that which is really hardly more than satisfying to the animal in our nature, and not in touch with the intellectual and spiritual.

Is it not a fact that men are not trained to respect themselves as men-to feel that their manhood is greater and higher and nobler than all things else; that it is something that cannot be lessened by poverty; that its value is independent of circumstances, and in all places and at all times is worthy of reverence?

Is not this too material an age; one-in which we place too much stress upon mere accessories in place of the real thing which determines what our lives shall be? Are not men apt to look out rather than in, and to Are not men apt to look out rather than in, and to place their hopes upon external forces rather than the internal ones of their own being? Is not the tendency could do, for the community's 17,000 young men, work which leads men to pin their judgment to the opinions of the so-called labor leaders rather than upon their own banded together into a strong citizens' committee to intelligence one thing that is leading men so far away raise $100,000 for a new building, the association's furror old habits of thought and independent action, and ture is very auspicious for increased usefulness. filling them with discouragement and unrest?

Beyond question one great difficulty in life is that sponsibility of their own failures to somebody else's

It is not society which makes or mars our life, it is we ourselves. We need have no fear for the manhood of the boy who has the courage to say in whatever he law-fully undertakes, "I will." This power of determina-tion has more to do with success in life than any other one factor. It is stronger than society; mightier than the force of circumstances, for it is the general who leads on to victory. If men only realized this, life would not present so many failures, misfortune would not secure so many conquests. The old-time maxim, Where there is a will there's a way," is a most forcible condensation of a great truth. A determined will is a force that the mightiest of opposing circumstances cannot conquer. Sooner or later it will triumph and win its bloodless victory. It will sweep away every obstacle, drive misfortune and ill luck before it and win complete success.

So let men hush their complaints about society being in league against them, and rely upon their own determined effort and they shall soon discover that the secret of success lies with him who has learned "to labor and to wait," with an unfaltering faith in himself and an unyielding determination to succeed

"Do the duty that lies nearest thee" and do it well and promptly is the right rule of action for us all, and when it is the universal rule, then good-by forever to the strike and boycott, those foul nurslings of anarchy who fatten upon decaying manhood and thrive upon outrage and wrong. They are aliens in this free land, and are born of the ages of Old World oppression and tyranny, where man is not the sovereign citizen, but the oppressed subject and the serf and plebelan of the centuries. But here in this land of the free, where the poor man of today may be the millionaire of tomorrow, and the rail splitter and the canal boat driver of the present may be the nation's Chief Executives in the future if they be but the possessors of a noble manhood and persistent energy, what excuse has the poor man to rail against the constitution of society and blame others than himself if he makes a failure of his life? What excuse for taking up those two-edged weapons, the strike and boycott, and piercing with them the sovereign citizens of this New World who accord to all men equal rights and equal freedom?

Let us think of these things and give to them the consideration that is needed before our great industries are paralyzed and our prosperity retarded by these senscless weapons of unpatriotic agitators and indus-REMARKS BY MEN OF THE TIMES.

Three-cent fares would certainly make ten rides look like thirty cents.

The copious rains fall upon the land like a benediction, full of hope and the promise of abundant harvests.

Southern California will be big with bounteous harvests this year and her prosperity will have to be spelled with the biggest kind of a P.

Where is the dry-year croaker? Let him take to the hills and hide his diminished head or he will surel; be drowned out before the rains are over.

It is only very recently that the learned critics were It is only very recently that the learned critics were unanimous in expressing the opinion that poetry would completely lose its hold on public taste. Notwithstanding this, however, the newspapers are now publishing more poetry than at any previous time, because there is a popular craving for it. "Poetry," said Emerson, "is the dearest thing in life to me."

New gold fields of immense richness have been discovered on American territory in Alaska, but according to the press dispatches they are 160 miles from anything in the eating line. That is the one grand difficulty with this Klondike wealth. It is too much mixed up with glaciers and snowslides and raw dog meat and 120 below to be very fascinating.

With sixty-one business men much more effective.

The poppy fields are a great attraction to people at Beyond question one great difficulty in life is that the great mass of men have not yet learned the omnipotence there is in well-directed human effort, when guided and controlled by an unyielding determination. They are too much the creatures of circumstances, too ready to yield to discouragements, and to shift the regested that some of the electric lines running out of Angeles toward the ocean might increase their tions and revenues by plowing up an acre of grossome convenient point and planting poppy seed would not require a large amount of seed to planting the control of the control of

THE BLESSED RAIN.

The very earth is laughing now With gladness at the copious rain Which falls upon the hillside's brow And on the emerald-covered plain,

The growing grasses all do hear, The blossoms smile and lift their face; The flowering trees are standing near And pouring fragrance into space.

The tinkling raindrops seem like notes Of glad bells filling all the air. How soft and low their music floats— Low as a saint's voice when at prayer,

We hear in them the promise sweet Of harvests full and rich and free Each drop that falls beneath our feet Whispers of plenty that shall be

The sun is hiding as they fall, But still the earth is glad and gay. From lowly grasses to the tall Leaf-bannered trees that o'er us sway.

The clouds, like wings of blessings spread Above our heads, fill all the sky, And rich the treasures that they shed— How full their blessed ministry!

The streamlets leap amid the sands, And gather heart as on they go; The river breaks its narrow bands And laughs at its new overflow.

And when the storm is past, how we Shall welcome sun and shining blue? The world will then be fair to see, For Growth will marshal here anew

Her great, grand army, silently, With rank on rank and file on file, They'll capture Nature, till we see The whole land with new beauty smile.

The flowers will wake to newer life, And bloom afresh upon their stems; Lilles and roses will be rife With new-wrought, fragrant diadems.

And oh, the rain-washed skies! How falr How deep and vast will they outspread sun-filled sea of shining air, A light-wrought curtain overhead.

As noon were in the valleys be And all her golden glory filled The heart of day, from early morn Till the unhindered starlight spilled

Its radiant silver on Night's breast, Bringing uncounted worlds to view, That in the deeps of ether rest-That world-cradling, star-sown

O fair, so fair, so wondrous fair Beyond all other lands we know. This land of ours when parented By sun and rain; its overflow

Of wondrous harvests all the year
Makes glad our hearts, and summer skiss
Are cloudless, and we never fear
The maddened tempest's batteries.

They are not here; a land of calm, Of blessed sunshine and of flowers, The land of peace, the land of palm, Such is this glorious land of ours. ELIZA A. O many was noted for her poverty. She is becoming noted for her riches. Under him she has planted investments all over the world. She has $500,000,000 invested in South America, $250,000,000 in Africa and an equal sum in Mexico and the United States. A large part of the coffee fields of Guatemala are owned by Germans, and German merchants are to be found in every city of Central America.

For the past 150 years the British have been making foreign investments. They have plowed the continents and seeded them with shillings, expecting each to bring back a sovereign in return. Their foreign holdings are now estimated at $10,000,000,000, but it has taken more than a century to accumulate them. Today the Germans are said to have $5,000,000,000 invested outside their over country and they have made the past of their own country, and they have made the most of these investments since the Kaiser took charge fifteen years ago. The contrast is striking and the more so as the Germans are by no means satisfied, but are reaching out for more.

The Kaiser Courting Uncle Sam.

There is no doubt but that the Kalser is courting Uncle Sam in order to get a big share of the American trade. The visit of Prince Henry, the naming of the yacht after the daughter of the President and the giv-and file was composed of the offscourings of foreign ships, and there was little doubt that such a force would be wiped out by a trained navy like that of Spain.

"If it is not," he concluded, "the war will continue until the resources of both nations are exhausted."
"And what will happen then, pray?" asked the Amer-

"Oh!" was the reply, "Germany will then have its innings. It will come in and be the arbitrator and settle all matters between the two nations."

Such opinions of the Americans changed rapidly as such opinions of the Americans changed rapidly as the Spanish war went on. The Emperor foresaw the result at the start, and he gave his officials the cue. He changed-public opinion so that today the best of the Ger-mans are anxious to be associated with us and some of their ablest thinkers helieve that this is their only chance for a permanently successful foreign trade.

A German View of America's Future.

indeed, the Germans are more astounded at american growth than any other nation of Europe. They measure their millions in 25-cent pleces, or marks, and a German needs to be only one-fourth as rich as an American to be a millionaire. The real millionaires are very few, and there are no enormous fortunes like those of our country. The people are scared at our big trusts. The iron men do not see how they can compete with the United States Steel Company, and the exporters are frightened by the steamship merger. In the Reichstag yacht after the daughter of the President and the giving of the statue of Frederick the Great are looked upon in secreting, too, and under him Germany is fast in the commercial giant of continental Europe.
It push out only a few years before his acto push out only a few years before his acto the throne, and she has already one-eighth of the time of the world. He has trebled the the business men approve of his actions.

Indeed, he is doing much for the United States. At the time of the war with Spain the sympathy of the Germans was with the Spainards and many of the military officers here thought they would be victorious.
They had looked upon us as tradesmen and dollar-chasthey are into products which help supply the formate created under this imperial drummer.

The daughter of the President and the givting of the statue of Frederick the Great are looked upon in some to that end. Everyone here knows that the Emperor admires the United States and the united States Steel Company, and the exame trade is steadily brought to the form, It terhausen, the famous professor of political economy in the University of Strasburg. This man has written a book on our trade supremacy and how the the Germans should combat it. In this book he prophesies that American capital will eventually absorb the European state, municipal and industrial securities. He shows that we will buy all the good stocks and become Europe's great creditor. Then the best of the European manu-facturers and the most skilled workmen will emigrate to America. There will be less and less employment for labor, and the financial and military strength of the European nations will finally weaken."

"At the same time," the learned baron professor "the United States will gain in political might. They will enlarge their army and navy. They will acquire colonies. They will call the Pacific Ocean their own, and realize their own ideas of international arbitration by being themselves the arbitrators."

As a preventive against such a possibility the pro-fessor wants the European states to join together in a tariff combination against us, to have free trade as far as possible among themselves and to support each other in any and every tariff war against the United States.

The Kaiser Studying Our Trade.

There is no doubt but that the Kaiser is studying the cituation and the evidence is that he looks upon success as a foregone conclusion. At any rate he is do-ing all he can to get into our commercial band wagos. He is advising the manufacturers to copy American methods and is sending his officials across the water to learn what they are. Privy Councellor Goldberger, who recently visited the United States and upon his return recently visited the United States and upon his return wrote a book treating of our industries, was received with high favor at court. The Emperor decorated him and advised other officials to go forth and do likewise. As a result there is a deal of quiet investigation of the United States going on at the present time, and the Kaiser is collecting flews from all sources. Every leading American capitalist who comes to Berlin is inter-viewed by the Emperor or his officials. Pierpont Morgan was recently made much of by His Majesty, and an entertainment which the Kaiser gave to prominent Amer-icans at Kiel was probably actuated by the desire to cultivate American trade.

They Worship the Kaiser.

All this has materially increased the standing of Americans in the eyes of the Germans. American trav-elers are better treated and American goods are more popular. I have shown you how our styles are largely supplanting those of Paris and London and how the trade mark "made in the United States," now ranks above "made in England" or "made in Germany."

Indeed the Germans are very proud of their Emperor and they follow his lead more than is generally sup-posed. They copy his manners and dress. Take, for instance, the ugly green felt hats with feathers in them which you often see on the streets of Berlin and other German cities. No American would wear one, but the German patriot is proud to do so because the Emperor wears such a hat when out hunting. I will not say that when the Kaiser takes snuff all Germany sneezes, but there is no doubt that it is due to his example that the most of the Germans curl their mustaches so that they tickle their noses. The Kaiser schnurrbart or mustache has made the fortune of many a wax maker here and patent mustache curlers are advertised in the papers.

His Majesty waxes his mustache so that its ends turn out like a bow, and every young German, official and commoner, does likewise. Some men carry combs in their pockets and you can see them, slyic arranging their pockets and you can see them slyly arranging their noustaches in the street cars, holding their hands over their faces as they do so. Every one gives his mustache a twist at odd moments, and all, from the hotel waiter to the highest military official, are proud if they can preserve the Kaiserly curl.

A Business Emperor.

The Kaiser is a good business man. One of the chief canufacturers of Frankfort on the Main thus expressed It to me the other day:

"He is the business head of this business nation. He knows more about our German industries than any knows more about our German industries than any other man, and he does more than anyone else to push German trade. It is he who keeps us alive by his brains and farsightedness. The trouble is he has no money and the country is poor. If he were King of England or had a country like the United States, he would make it boom and in time he would commercially conquer the earth. As it is he is manacled by lack of resources and lack of capital. What he wants is more land and more woney and for this reason, he is anylous to have cole. money, and for this reason he is auxious to have colo-

Said Consul-General Guenther of Frankfort: "The Kaiser is not appreciated in America. He is a genius, not only from a business standpoint, but from al-most every other standpoint. He can do many things well. He can paint, write poetry and compose music. He is a great thinker and in everything a leader. I have never known a man to work as he does. He frequently comes to the watering places near Frankfort for a vacation. At such times he gets up at 6 o'clock and goes to work. He keeps at it all day and often far into the night. The next day he is up again at 6 as bright as a dollar." In many of the factories I visited throughout Germany and of the same intense nervous organization. Roosevelt has an iron jaw; so has the Kaiser. Roosevelt is brown from exposure to the air and sun; so is the Kaiser. Our President has a piercing eye, and so has the Emperor of Germany.

Each man is full of self-confidence. On his way to Washington from Buffalo immediately after the assassination of President McKinley Mr. Roosevelt was asked if he was not afraid of the responsibility which that death had thrust upon him. He replied: "Not a bit." death had thrust upon him. He replied: "Not a bit." And he was not. The self-confidence of the German Emperor is notorious. He has frequently said that he believes himself divinely appointed and is charged of taking the place that Mohammed held as the pretended mouthplece of the Almighty. The old Czar of Russia, in speaking of this, sarcastically said: "Der Gott weisst alles, aber der Kaiser weisst alles besser." Or, in other words, "God knows everything, but the German Emperor knows exerciting a little better." peror knows everything a little better."

Of Simple Habits.

Both Mr. Roosevelt and the Kalser are plain in many ways and extravagant in others. They both believe in physical development, both like plain meals and both can be satisfied with little. Roosevelt has a plain breakfast with his family, the Kaiser eats with the Empress, and is satisfied with an egg. a roll and a cup of tea. Their lunches are more generous and each can sit down to a dinner of many courses and enjoy it. I doubt whether either ever had the dyspepsia, and if he should have it, he would not go to a doctor, but would jump upon his horse and ride it off.

Both Roosevelt and the Kalser are fond of horses. Both Roosevelt and the Raiser are lond of nores. Both ride often and ride hard. Roosevelt keeps a num-ber of saddle horses. The Emperor can afford more and has more. His saddle horses are carefully selected. They are noted for their speed and staying powers. They must obey quickly and they must be exercised daily in order to stand any kind of a strain put upon

Two Good Family Men.

Both the President and the Emperor are good family men. They are good husbands and good fathers. They rule their own households, and, as far as I can learn, neither will have any foolishness as to the education or training of the children. Some of the Roosevelt lit-tle ones go to the common schools in Washington. They have limited allowances, and do some of their shopping at the Seventh street stores,

The Kaiser's children are brought up to work. They have to mind their teachers. They are trained in gymnastics, sleep upon hard beds and eat plain food. They are made to mind, as is evidenced by many of the stories which are told in Berlin. One such relates to the Crown Prince. It happened years ago when he was much younger than he is now. He was drilling his lit-tle brothers, and when one of the boys did not keep step he marched up to him and wrung his ear. The Kaiser saw this and objected. The hoy replied: "I am the Crown Prince, and according to law my brothers are bound to obey me." "Yes, that is true," said the Kaiser. As Crown Prince your brothers must obey you, but you nust also remember that I am the Kaiser, and as such you have to obey me. I order you not to do that again.

The Kaiser and the Army.

This comparison holds good as to military matters. Both the President and Kaiser are fond of the army. Either would rather be combatted than rule peacefully. Both believe in fighting and both are proud of their association with their soldiers. The Kaiser is always courting his army. He takes pains to get close to the men, and it is said that he knows more than 10,000 of his officers personally and can call them by name. He spends a large part of his time at the army parades and always attends the maneuvers. He wears the uniforms of the different regiments and has an official rank in many of them. He is never prouder than when attending a review. He understands everything connected with his soldiers from private to general. He believes in the army, and wants to increase it at any expense and at any cost.

The Emperor's Big Income.

I have said that the tastes of the Emperor and our President compare also in their extravagance as well as in their simplicity. Each could make a meal on beer and cheese and like it, but each is fond of display, and at the proper time makes a great spread. This is seen in the remodeling of the White House and the gorgeous dinners at Washington, and also in the splendid court functions of the Kaiser here in Berlin.

The government has had to increase the Kaiser's civil list on account of his social expendiures. He has now about $5,000,000 a year, and this notwithstanding he pays no house rent and has many free lunches. He has also a large income from his private estates. The Hohenzollern fortune amounting, it is said, to about $25,000,000 has come to him, and he has other estates, which bring him in all told something like $1,000,000 a year.

Berlin, Germany.

THE RAIN DROP.

In many of the factories I visited throughout Germany I have been told that the Kaiser knows all about them and that he often visits the industrial centers. He had close connections with the Krupps and frequently studied the gun factory. He makes the Crown Prince go to the places and plans tours for him by which he is acquiring a practical view of industrial and commercial as well as military Germany.

The Kaiser has visited all the big factories about Berlin. He attends every exposition and during the past year has several times honored the Dusseldorf exposition with his presence. At the same time he keeps track of the various commercial and manufacturing conventions, and apparently looks upon the whole empire as his business field, regarding it his duty to push it in every possible way.

The Kaiser and Our President.

They are of about the same age in the drop of rain is a commonplace every day of the ordinary, something to wonder at. So most men think. Mud Geysers. They were quite tame and allowed the Mud Geysers. They were quite tame and allowed the photographers to approach very near before making off. Further down the valley the photographers came upon the main herd, headed by Old Tuskegee; who is said to be the largest bison in existence, weighing over 3000 pounds. Tuskegee is covered with a network of scars and has only one eye and the remnant of a tail left, as the result of his many fights. He has been seen to the result of his many fights. He has been seen to give battle to three pugnacious bull elk at once and has killed several of them in combat. A few summers ago Tuskegee left the herd and charged a six-in-hand coach, goring one of the horses so badly it had to be shot. The coach was nearly overturned by the frightened horses, and the tourists were almost frenzied with terror. An order was at once issued by the park superintendent, directing that Old Tuskegee be shot on sight. For a month a special detail from the fort scoured the hills in search of him, but the old buffalo had retreated into the impenetrable forests above the main road and into the impenetrable forests above the main road and nothing was seen of him for nearly two years. Then one morning a sixteen-point elk was found crushed and torn and trampled in the mud of the Violet Springs, and the Yellowstone Park guards knew that Old Tuskand the Yellowstone Park guards knew that Old Tuskegee had returned to his own. Another superintendent was in charge, however, and the old order was stayed.
For the last two years Old Tuskegee has proved his gratitude by behaving like an exemplary buffalo.
Few persons care to venture near Old Tuskegee, so the photographers left him in his glory after getting a

found a trail of wapiti, or elk. The animals were seen a few miles beyond, and then began a chase in the deep snow. By keeping on the higher ground, the photo-graphers drove the elk to the deep drifts of the valley where the chase was soon ended. The big bull elk in charge of the herd turned and faced the photographers. then he found that his charges were about to be overtaken. As he stood at bay in the deep snow the grating of his teeth, as he ground his jaws in impotent rage, heard a distance of over one hundred yards. Trailing the Big Cats.

Occasionally a moose can be surprised in the deep snow. These animals are very rare in the West, how-ever, and are almost sacred. Mountain lions are easy to trail but are hard to find in the snow, for the reason that they do not venture far from rocky ground where they can hide themselves in some inaccessible crevice. Bob cats are easy to run down and photograph, however, as they invariably take to a tree when hard pressed and will stand in the branches, snatling and spitting, though never jumping at the photographer, no matter how near he approaches.

At the last session of Congress an appropriation of $15,000 was made for the protection of the buffalo in the park. C. J. Jones, who is better known as "Buffalo" Jones, was appointed warden. Mr. Jones probably knows more about the buffalo and its habits than any other man in the world. He has made a study of the animals and for several years has conducted interesting and valuable experiments looking to cross-breeding the buffalo with cattle. Mr. Jones has provided a corral for the buffalo herd near Mammoth Hot Springs. This will afford shelter and food during the winter and will be a great protection for the buffalo calves. A small corral has been constructed on Pelican Creek. There are about twenty-five head of buffalo in the Yellowstone Park herd and they are increasing very slowly. believed that by capturing some of the herd and keeping them under fence until their young are well developed, and then turn them loose in the park, the increase will be more rapid. To start this new herd fourteen buffalo have been purchased from the Allard herd of Medora, N. D.

Bear and Euffalo.

The Yellowstone Park buffalo are the only wild ani-mals of their kind in existence. They take fright at the approach of tourists, and remain far from the traveled attempts to get photographs of wild game roads in the park. Consequently many visitors who go by the ordinary stage route are disappointed at not getting a sight of the buffaloes and are inclined to believe that the stories of the existence of a herd are mythical.

The traveler who avoids the beaten trails, however, is sure to be rewarded by a sight of these animals as well as by many other members of the wild population of sure to be rewarded by a sight of these animals as well as by many other members of the wild population of Uncle Sam's great park.

The bear in Yellowstone Park have increased more largely than any other family of animals. They afford the greatest amusement and interest to tourists, owing to the fact that their inquisitive nature prompts them to haunt the trails and wagon roads. Bears of all shades and sizes can be seen in almost any quarter of the park and campers will do well to guard their supplies from the paws of these prying beasts. The bears come down in great numbers to the hotels to feed upon the garbage piles. Here it is that tourists get many pictures of the animals. In some instances, however, the apparent tameness of the Yellowstone Park bears has resulted in giving tourists a severe fright. Seeing the bears around the hotels, tourists are sometimes inclined to believe that the animals are tame, and consequently they approach too close to the wild creatures in other locations, thereby actually endangering their lives. It is forbidden by the park regulations for anyone to feed the bears except at the regular garbage piles, but this rule is constantly being violated, and last season such a violation resulted in the serious injury of a tourist who went too close to a big silver-tip. The regulation has been made more stringent in consequence of this accident and the park guards are careful to impress it unores. been made more stringent in consequence of this accideat and the park guards are careful to impress it upon all tourists that they must let the bears severely alone. The bears, however, cannot be induced to leave the tourists alone, and they do much mischlef in un-guarded camps. It is their favorite trick to break downt tents and rummage about provision chests, and many a camping party in the Yellowstone has come back to find a dismantled tent, while mischievous bruin would be seen lumbering away with his head and shoulders covered with flour.

Antelope and Elk.

The other animal life of the Yellowstone is so varied that a photographer could spend years in the park and not exhaust its wonderful resources in wild game. The park is fifty-miles wide by sixty-five long, and is larger than Delaware and Rhode Island combined, hence some idea can be obtained of the vast space through which the animals roam unmolested. There are large bands the animals roam unmolested. There are large bands of el's, deer and antelope constantly crossing and recrossing the park. The antelope are rapidly increasing, whereas in other parts of the West they have almost disappeared, owing to their slaughter by hunters. Bands of from fifty to one hundred antelope were frequently seen last year in the vicinity of the town of Gardiner. These beautiful animals are protected by the laws of Montana as well as by the national laws of the Yellowstone, hence there is every prospect that they will not become extinct. come extinct.

Mountain sheep are also increasing, and a few of these have been seen quite close to the road between Gardiner and Mammoth Hot Springs. These were so tame that one could approach within thirty yards, or nearer, on foot without their being in the least disturbed. Wolves, and coyotes are the only animals that do not find the Yellowstone a haven of protection. The park guards kill these pests of the range and forest at every opportunity.

The Smaller Tribes.

The Smaller Tribes.

The fox, the badger, the rock dog, the porcupine, the jackrabbit, and other small animals lend interest to the wild life in the park, and in fact one can hardly take a step in this game preserve without having his interest awakened by some living thing. The bird life is numerous, there being large numbers of eagles, to say nothing of the black turkey buzzard that feeds on such carcasses as have not been stripped by the coyotes. Vast numbers of ducks, grouse, pelicans and geese are to be found in the park, and the game preserve is something that appeals at every instant to the hunter, whether he relies on the rife or the camera.

The park authorities do not rely on mere regulations, however, to prevent the slaughter of animals. Detachments of Uncle Sam's soldiers guard the various entrances to the park, and are at all times patroling it in every direction. These soldiers are specially chosen for the work and are all expert ski or anowshee men. The tourist who carries a gun into the park must have for the work and are all expert ski or snowshoe men. The tourist who carries a gun into the park must have the weapon officially sealed at the muzzle. When he goes out of the park he must submit the gun for inspection, with the seal unbroken to prove that it has not been discharged. If it has been discharged he must have witnesses to prove that he fired to defend himself from the attack of some dangerous animal. If he cannot do this the penalty is severe.

The Back-door Route.

It has been shown that so much better views of the park, both as to scenery and wild game, can be taken far from the main-traveled roads that every year sees an increased number of tourists who go in at the back door, as it were. A favorite way is to go by the Burlington route to Cody, Wyo., a spur of the railroad having been built to the town which bears "Buffalo Bill's" name. At Cody outfits can be secured and tourists can pack forty-five miles across Wyoming into the park. In this way they enter the park through a wild and interesting country and avoid much of the monotony of tourist travel. If it is desired to travel by wagon, the difference is only a comparatively few miles, with good roads all the way. Large parties can be taken in this way, and many western beople, who have tried both routes, prefer to go in by Cody Instead of by the beaten paths. It is impossible for many travelers to try the rougher.

It is impossible for many travelers to try the rougher, if more enjoyable way of reaching the wild game paradise, however, and they must depend upon more conventional settings for the trip. While they will not be able to see as much of the Yellowstone Park wild game as those who try a "back door" route, they will find plenty to keep the camera busy. Some of the best wild game pictures made in the park have been secured from the main roads by tourists who have surprised some of the animals venturing close to the haunts of men. It is a peculiar sensation when one comes upon a lonely bear, or a herd of buffalo, and this sensation is heightened by the knowledge that the instinctive desire to send home a bullet cannot be gratified.

Whether the trip to the wild game headquarters is made in summer or winter time, it is certain to prove of great interest to the man who loves nature in all its forms and who takes an especially deep interest in the forms and who takes an especially deep interest in the study of wild game. The scenic wonders of the Yellow-

C AN JUAN (Porto Rico) March 20.—The result of significance attaches to its outcome. It is a sort of test case. The success or failure of our efforts here will undoubtedly have a direct influence upon the future of West Indian affairs. Although the chain of islands com-posing the West Indian group are wonderfully endowed with fertility of soil and desirability of climate, their com-mercial prosperity has been suffering a gradual decline. Students of the situation assert that their retrogression is but the result of unequal conditions; they are like a house that is divided against itself. They are owned by various European powers, and, as children join in the quarrels of their elders, are party to the prejudicial wranglings and racial dissensions which sap the vitality of the Old World and constantly menace its

Aside from the lack of what is known nowadays as "community of interest" between the islands, Europe is too far away to afford a market for their products, and the proximity of the United States makes them naturally dependent upon it for the sale of their stuff. Their exact position is really like a lot of youngsters who have a place to sleep, but whose parents do not properly provide for them, thus forcing them to rustle among the neighbors for a scant livelihood. The very plausible argument is advanced that if these dependent ones could eat and sleep under the same roof they would be much

Now that Porto Rico has become our adopted child Now that Porto Rico has become our adopted child everybody is waiting to see how she is going to fare. Upon her development, or failure to develop, rests the decision of a great question; the cettlement of a far-reaching issue. There has not been a time within the past hundred years when some of our most astute statesmen did not champion the extension of our au-Thority over these islands, believing that our money and our market were the two things which would combine to rejuvenate them, and make them live up to the possibilities of their rich resources. We have $6,000,000 people who desire, and who are amply able to pay for. people who desire, and who are amply able to pay for, the great variety of tropical products which can be produced here in abundance, if sufficient encouragement and pretection is given to capital to induce it to enter the field for the purpose of developing it. Will American rule convert the West Indies into a desirable field of endeavor, for Yankee energy? Will free access to the great American market make the islands prosperous? These are the great questions that little Porto Rico must prove or disprove.

If one listens to all the talk that comes to his ears as he knocks about the West Indies, and does not take the trouble to go beneath it for the facts, the impreswill soon be formed that the Americans have made a bad botch of their attempt to inaugurate a new era in the little pearl of the Caribbean. The Euroean officeholders realize that their jobs are at stake and they are fight-ing hard to hold them; they know if Porto Rico gets off on the right foot that their cake will soon be dough. If this little midget blossoms out under the care of Uncle Sam a lot of her neighbors are soon going to want new dress of the star and stripe pattern. This will be the certain and natural result if our administration is a success. And it explains the presence of so much hostility and unfavorable comment in the other islands.

Too Much Politics.

But all the talk about our failure does not come from the outside. There is as much criticism in Porto Rico as there is out of it. This internal dissatisfaction, although of other origin, is as natural as the external, when its real nature is understood. It is caused by an overdose of politics. There is really nothing alarming n this, as it is a well-known fact that weeds will flourish in new soil-until they are turned under. There is no denying that one result of the new conditions is a bad crop of native politicians, but these need not be permitted to thrive to any great extent. Taken at their worst they can have little influence on the general com-mercial kituation. A few cracked heads, caused by local issues can hardly have any influence on the sale of the island's coffee in New Orleans, its cigars in New York, or its oranges in Pittsburgh. The local fighters York, or its oranges in Pittsburgh. The local fighters will have to nurse their bumps and learn to keep out of trouble in the future.

Has American rule converted Porto Rico into a desirable field for Yankee endeavor? It certainly has. man without means and the capitalist have done well here. Let me give you actual proof of it. Here are a few stories of fortune that anyone acquainted in San Juan can vouch for:

Shortly after the American occupation, Joe Wenar of New Orleans landed in the capital with $1.50, and a determination to do something. Some say he borrowed money from the captain of the ship he came on, but Joe says he did not. At any rate he does not have to borrow now. He startct an eating place near the barracks, and soon afterward a cafe on the plaza. He made $10,000 during the first five months, got into the hotel busione during the first five months, got into the hotel business, and has been coining money ever since. Two Views of Chamberlain MOST ADMIRED AND MOST HATED MAN IN ENGLAND.

By a Special Centribu'or.

O Englishman of today is more written about, more admired, more hated, than Joseph Chamberlain. Yet there is no Englishman less known. Here are two glimpses of Mr. Chamberlain's personality and character, which show the man as he really is—not as he is painted by his enthusiastic friends and by Ms bitter

One foggy November morning in 1901 I met Mr. Chamberlain at the Colonial Office in London. I had just arrived from the West Lodies, and he sent for me be-cause he desired certain information regarding the political and commercial conditions of those islands wh I happened to be in a position to give hm.

The newsboys in the streets were selling "special extras" like wildfire. The name of Chamberlain loomed big on their placards; it was on the lips of every passerby. Two nights before he had made a speech which big on their placards; it was on the lips of every passerby. Two nights before he had made a speech which caused had blood between Germany and England. Count Von Bulow had just made a bitter reply, and everybody was wondering whether Mr. Chamberlain would return to the attack in another speech that evening. England—
Europe even—had not been so excited for months.
Meanwhile, Mr. Chamberlain was quietly sitting in his room at the Colonial Office discussing with an insignificant colonist, such details as the depth of water in the smaller harbors of Jamaica and the best way to tax the Jamaican peasant. You would have thought that he had never heard of Germany or Count Von Bu-Chamberlain's Reply to Balfour's Mes. ge.

As we talked, a private secretary, bearing a telegram

"Mr. Balfour has wired, sir, asking you to take his place at the meeting tonight. He is indisposed and can-not speak. He suggests that you should reply to the German Chancellor."

"Tell him I am sorry, but it is impossible," Mr. Chamberiain answered. "I am busy this morning with this gentleman from Jamaica, and cannot prepare anything.

Tonight I have to see a gentleman from Ceylon."
"Could you not postpone that?" the secretary ventured to suggest.

"Impossible," said Mr. Chamberlain, sharply, "He has come thousands of miles to see me, and, in my case, colonial business takes precedence of everything

Herein lies the secret of Mr. Chamberlain's power. He never spares himself trouble, he goes to the root of things, and he is not moved a hair's breadth by the wind of popular clamor. Europe may shriek if it cares to, but he goes right on, unruffled, with his day's work.

Mr. Chamberlain received me in a large, handsomely furnished room, hung with portraits of former Colonial Ministers. Unlike the offices of most British Cabinet Ministers, it was absolutely destitute of official papers or any signs of work. Mr. Chamberlain does not burden himself with the work of a secretary, like many politicians. He sits down comfortably in an easy chair, with a cigar, thinks for a moment, gives a few sketchy orders to an amanuensis—and the thing is done. It may be a new Constitution for South Africa or the ap-Ministers. Unlike the offices of most British Cabinet pointment of a prison warden in the Seychellas—it is all the same. It comes in the day's work, and is done like clockwork, without the least worry or fusa.

His Eagerness to Please.

The private secretary introduced me, and Mr. Chamberlain was extremely cordial. It is commonly supposed by those who have not met him that his manner is brusque and cold; but, as a fact, there is no public man more courteous. He has a distinct personal charm, and at times he displays an almost pathetic eagerness to s he displays an almost pathetic eagerness. This was shown at the outset of our talk.

"They are from "Will you have a cigar?" he asked. your own colony, and you will agree with me that the Jamaican cigars are the best in the world."

It was impossible to keep from wondering whether he kept other boxes in bis desk filled with Trinchinopoly cheroots for visitors from Ceylon and Borneo cigars for the men from Borneo.

"Let me introduce you to the Earl of Onslow," he pro-seded. "We try to look after the colonies as well as we can together."

The contrast between the two men was remarkable.

Mr. Chamberlain's face was alive with eager, intense intelligence. None of his photographs does him justice.

He looks like a man who is pure brain, without an ounce of the animal, and he is much better looking than he is represented to be. At first sight he seems not more than 45; but a little scrutiny reveals that his jet black hair is dyed and that in other ways art has repaired the ravages of time. He is precise about his personal appearance, and appeared on this occasion as if he had just been turned out of a bandbox.

Lord Onslow, on the other hand, was slovenly dressed. His get-up was more like a petty shopkeeper's than a statesman's. His face was heavy and gloomy, his ex-pression dull, his conversation feeble and ill-formed. Yet he had governed great British colonies and held the post of Under Secretary of State for the colonies

Chamberlain's Great Knowledge of Petty Affairs.

As we talked, Mr. Chamberlain showed a marvelous knowledge of the petty local affairs of the West Indies.
With the enormous strain of the South African War on his shoulders, he had yet found time to study the latest developments of their intricate parochial politics. Lord Onslow could not conceal his admiration.

"Pon my word, Chamberlain," he said. "You seem to know everything about every colony there is. you manage it?

'It is simple enough, Onslow," was the quiet reply. "I only know what one in my position ought to know.

One works, that's all. Don't you ever read dispatches?" Presently Lord Onslow was moved to emulation, a began to make suggestions on his own account. We were talking about a new subsidized steamship service, and he urged that the vessels should be sent to a certain town in Jamaica.

It is an excellent idea, my dear Onslow," said Mr. Chamberlain with a satirical smile. "The only objection is that the steamers would have to sail overland to get there.'

His Lordship collapsed and said no more throughout the interview

What Chamberlain Said of America.

I told Mr. Chamberlain that the British colonies in the West Indies were falling more and more every year under the commercial sway of the United States, alike

"There's nothing the matter with that," he replied.
"We are not jeslous. On the contrary, we ought to feel grateful to America for reviving the fallen fortunes of those distressed colonies. We are glad to offer America a fair field in our possessions, and more than glad to welcome her entrance into the field of colonial enterprise, as I remarked in a recent article. There is plenty of room for all of us in the immense task of civilizing the tropics, but, I fear, America will find the work a great deal harder than she ever dreamed of. In dealing with people like those in the Philippines, she will have to modify the principles of government materially. I see no hope for tropical civilizaton except in benevolent, firm, practically despotic government, ernment is a hopeless proposition."

After some further talk, Mr. Chamberlain asked why st men in the West Indian colonies took no part in politics.

"Because they are exposed to vulgar abuse if they do," replied. "Mud is flung at them by the bucketful."
He smiled bitterly. "If we thought of that, would! replied.

He smiled bitterly. "If we thought of that, would any of us be in politica?—I have had mud flung at me from the days when I first went into local politica in Birmingham. A man must simply do his work, disregard the abuse, and never trouble to reply to the lies told about him. That is the only way to get anything done. I admire the public men in America in this matter. Probably nowhere else is a politician more abused; nowhere else are his motives so freely mishterpreted and his character so bitterly assailed. But America's public men do not stop work on that account. They disregard the gnats who buzz around them." regard the gnats who buzz around them."

The Second Glimpse.

A few evenings later I met Mr. Chamberlain again under markedly different circumstances. I went down to a Stepney slum to take part in an entertainment given to the "submerged Tenth." Coming away, in company with an East End parson, I saw a man go into a ement house. Why, that's Mr. Chamberlain!" I exclaimed in astonishment.

"Certainly," said the parson. "He often comes here He is most charitable. He helps lots of people around here. He supports a family in that house. The man broke his leg, and they might starve but for Mr. Cham-

"Chamberlain!" I ejaculated. "Chamberlain, the man of iron! The man without bowels of compassion! The Mephistopheles of politics! Is it possible? What would the Radical papers cay if they only knew?'

"He doesn't want them to know," replied the preacher.
"He likes to do his good deeds under the rose. He puts on that cold, passionless, unsympathetic mask which the world knows so well; but at heart he is the most benevolent and Christian of men. In Birmingham and London he personally relieves an immense amount of distress. Let us go in and see him."

We entered the house and found Mr. Chamberlain in a small room upstairs, where the sick man was lying on a small pallet. The statesman was talking cheerily to the wife, telling her that her husband would soon be well again. He had brought food and money for her, and a bottle of wine and some cigars for the sufferer.

He asked after the children, by name, made himself thoroughly at home, and displayed a keen interest in the woman's talk about her household troubles.

Why Chamberlain Hides His Charities.

When he saw us he greeted us warmly and asked me not to write anything about meeting him there. I refused to promise, saying that it ought to be known.

"It would correct the popular impression of you," the arron added.

"Well, it's my own affair," said Mr. Chamberlain
The public has nothing to do with it."
This side of Mr. Chamberlain's character, which is

DIVORCE FOR REVENUE

We are now anxiously awaiting the fate of the Di-vorce Bill. The King, I am given to understand, favors it, but Queen Margherita is dead against it, and this has caused some slight friction between them. has caused some slight friction between them. Apropos of divorce, here is a curious story, for the truth of which I can vouch. A lady and gentleman of narrow means, after many discussions how to increase them, decided upon divorce. As they could not carry out their plan in Italy they went to a neighboring State and attained their object. After this they returned to Italy, where the man simost immediately afterward married a rich forcelor. Here were become the discussion of the state of the stat foreign lady; and he is now keeping his divorced wife and child in comparative luxury with the money of his second wife. Whether Mme. No. 2 knows of this arrangement I cannot tell, but Mme. No. 1 does, and seems quite content with the arrangement.—[Rome Correspondence Modern Society.

How Baseballs are Made. ONE FACTORY MAKES NEARLY FIVE MILLIONS A YEAR.

By a Special Contributor.

ASEBALLS are used only during the spring and summer in the East, but all through the year they are made. One plant in Philadelphia has a monepoly in the manufacture of the best balls-the $1.50. official sort—and this plant employs, year in and year out, 1250 hands, and it makes, year in and year out, 1200 dozen balls a day. Thus its annual output is close upon 5,000,000 baseballs a year.

Spring is here. The players of the national game are imbering up. The millions of new baseballs that have been accumulating since last fall are being sold. The mathed of making all these balls are being sold. method of making all those balls—a glimpse at the in-nide of the big, five-story, red brick baseball factory, with its 1250 young men, young girls, and boys at work is interesting.

The first room in the factory is the winding-room This room is as big as a concert hall, and running up and down it in straight lines are machines, each about the size of a child. Before each machine a boy sits. He has on his right and on his left a wooden shelf. He has on his right and on his left a wooden shelf. Upon the right hand shelf are balls of the purest Para rubber, one inch in diameter. He takes up these balls, one at a time, and puts them into the machine. The machine winds about them, more regularly than hands could do, a very strong and pure quality of woolen yarn of a bluish hue. The yarn is of the thickness that is called four-ply; it is about as thick, that is, as a straw. After enough of it has been wound about the Para rub-ber center to make a ball two inches in diameter, the machine stops of its own accord, and the boy removes the little ball and places it on the shelf upon his left. Then he puts in the machine another Para rubber cen-ter-piece, and the instrument begins again to wind its woolen yarn about the rubber. This boy and this machine make, between them, little balls, half rubber and chine make, between them, little balls, half rubber and half yarn, two inches in diameter. That is their whole duty. Fifty boys and fifty machines do this work with a clocklike regularity in the big room.

There are a half dozen smaller boys who go to and fro with baskets, gathering up the two-inch balls as they are finished. These boys take them to a young man over in one corner, a young man called a "dipper." The dipper stands beside a wat the circ of a betty the balls. dipper stands beside a vat, the size of a bathtub, that is filled with a fluid as thin and colorless as water—a fluid that resembles water precisely. In this vat he dips the balls, and then stands them aside for a little while to dry. The weak-looking fluid is in reality a very pow-erful plastic composition, or liquid cement, and it is this composition which insures to the balls a permament roundness, which prevents them from ever being (as the phrase is,) batted out of shape.

The balls now go to fifty other boys at fifty other machines. These machines are like the first ones, only they are differently regulated. They wind upon the balls inch of a finer woolen yarn-first a blue and then a three-ply white yarn-and the balls are are ten feet in height, and the massive-looking ironwork in them weighs many tons. Each machine has a man seated before it, and each, with two strokes, cuts man seated before it, and each, with two strokes, cuts out the two covers of a ball and at the same time perforates the covers' edges. Each cover is in the shape of a figure 8. The machines cut out these figures as a woman, with a tumbler or with any sharp-edged circular instrument, cuts cookies out of sheets of dough. A sharp S-shaped iron punch descends upon the white horsehide, and bites out of it the half covers. The edges of the punch have little needles set close together in them. in them. It is these needles, piercing the cover, that make the perforations for the stitches.

The balls are stitched by men, for women are not strong enough for this work. The thread used is cotton, for neither silk nor linen thread will serve for baseball sewing. This is because the alum used in the tanning of the covers would rot silk, and because batting would break the fibers of linen. Thus balls sewed with silk or linen would be ripped apart ere three or four innings were played.

The men sit on saddles, astride, and two wooden arms hold the bails firm before them. They fit on a pair of covers, pull them tight with tweezers, clamp them together with staples, and then sew them, with very strong thread of red or blue, through the perforations made in their edges by the machines. After the sewing made in their edges by the machines. After the sewing a ball's seams are rough. Therefore it is rolled first by hand and afterward by machinery. Then into a machine goes the ball, and round and round it rolls, in a circle five feet in diameter, till it has traversed six or seven miles. It emerges thence quite smooth—a perfect ball now, ready to be stamped, packed, and put upon the market. It takes in the factory thirty minutes to make one

The only frog ranch in the West is this one owned and conducted by L. C. Combs, who for many years has nised the foreign edible for the American palate.

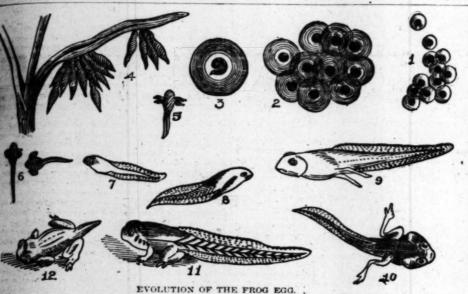

Many years' devotion of time and patience has succeeded in converting the common rain frog into the sader, juley, table variety, in which there is the same efference in flavor that is noticed in the domestic as distinguished from the wild species of any game.

died. Mr. Combs then gave up his downtown business and devoted his time entirely to the study of frog cul-ture. He made experiments with different soils, various methods of raising or lowering the water temperature, A food, which is the frog medicine, had to be discovered, and then, too, something had to be done to protect ered, and then, too, something had to be done to protect the frog eggs and the tadpoles from their various ene-mies. Also, how to improve upon the flavor and quality of the flesh came in for a share of study. A year or two passed without much profit; then, little by little, the frogs began to thrive. The long period of study was rewarded, and there were no more dead frogs. Almost every egg turned into a tadpole, then into a table delicacy. table delicacy.

That was years ago. Each year since that time has seen some new discovery. For the accommodation of the frogs, Mr. Combs has three ponds about forty feet in length, twenty in width, and perhaps three in derta. There is also an acre of sandy soil, some made marsh, and a tangled growth of wild shrubbery. In this way they have many of the conditions that they would enjoy in the wild state, yet they also have the advantage of ready food.

On sunny days the banks of the pond are filled with the shining creatures. At night, the mingled chorus, or "frog concert." as the neighbors call it, can be heard blocks away.

The frog like almost every living creature, grows to recognize a familiar voice, and learns to hop across the regrating—that is, with success and the realization when his particular name is called. Frog like tion of a profit—is a precious secret that is guarded with jealousy by this veteran frogger. Many attemptshare been made, especially in the West, to breed and perfect the common frog, but in most instances they have failed. The little creatures are stubborn to a degree; they demand liberty and plenty of room. They also demand a certain kind of mud, with a peculiar mineral deposit, in which to hibernate. The food, too, has important item; delicacles which they can prome for themselves while in a wild state must be fortheming, or they will die. With these obstacles in the many of success, the average experimenter in frog raising man becomes discouraged, throws up the venture in the sum of the sum been, one who succeeds in a frogery will be made to a little worry, for there is more clear profit p in on all sides with high fences, wire screens, bits, bars, and even a buildog, to warn away all woulding discovers of the frog-raising secret. To interview he owner is attended with more complications than are necessary to break through the red tape at the White louse and talk over the pleasure of bear hunting with resident Roosevelt. When he can be induced to talk, it. Combs gives a most interesting account of how he appened to choose this peculiar calling.

Always, when a boy, he, like many boys of the present day, delighted to visit the old pond in the south meadow, and to scoop up his felt hat full of wriggly, sulrming, little tadpoles. To watch their curious anties in swimming was a pastime of which he never tired.

Later, a pet frog was a special delight, but when many the transport of the amusement. ater, a pet frog was a special delight, but when maurity came, with its responsibilities, the amusement

The owner of the ranch scoured the streams and fields in a little that order, and then it came to him that he might have for market. He no sooner thought of the limitan he acted upon it. Although not credited with having a great amount of gray matter, these animals are still interesting studies, each one evidencing a different disposition, much as a each one evidencing a different disposition, much similar number of babies would do. Some are natured and refuse to quarrel, others are naturally timid and plunge into the water at the first commanding croak of a savage adult. Some are glutions, grab-bing all the food and shoving the weaker ones aside in order to capture all the finest morsels. Several out of a hundred show decidedly humorous qualities, and are inclined to play practical jokes, or tease a particularly sleepy cousin.

At the first suggestion of cold weather, the frogs dive

In addition to several wild insects and wild shrubs, which Mr. Combs keeps a profound secret, the frogs are daily given a portion of chopped raw liver, bread crumbs and the chopped leaves of vegetables.

To catch a large number of frogs in a few minutes, the stoppers in the tanks are pulled, and there lies the game within easy reach of the net, as the water drains game within easy reach of the net, as the water drains off. Large shipments are made in cases, especially constructed for the purpose.

With the invasion of foreign influence has come demand for foreign foods. In all portions of the West first animals were wild rain frogs, many of which, the confinement and the food provided, Combs has the only froggery in the West, it devolves upon him to fill the many orders that come tumbling over each other, especially during the holidays. Orders come from Denver, Salt Lake, and all portions of the Middle West. The order-book of the froggery shows that in one famous restaurant in San Francisco $1500 worth of frog legs were consumed during the year

The idea has been entertained, but as yet no steps have been taken toward its fulfillment, of canning the frog legs to fill the demand in countries to which shipments of live frogs are impossible. Several prominent physicians in San Francisco are now recommending the broth, and also the flesh of the frog, in place of the time-honored chicken. It is maintained that the muscular, yet tender, white flesh con-tains more nutriment than any other in equal amount. In domesticity the frog reaches a great size, some attaining the weight of three and four pounds. HARRIET QUIMBY.

BIG FOOD SCARES.

[Answers:]. Thousands of people who were wont to eat oysters whenever they could afford them would now eat oysters whenever they could afford them would now as soon think of swalllowing a spoonful of poison as one of those succulent shellfish, no matter where it came from. The day on which the recent scare became known there were 5000 fewer oysters than usual sold in London alone, and the next day 10,000. Soon the sale dropped to almost a standstill, except at the two or three most fashionable and costly "bars," where none but Whistable oysters are kept—they being beyond suspicion—and things became so bad for everybody connected with the oyster trade—which employs about 40,000 men—that the Oyster Merchants' Committee gathered hurriedly together at Fishmongers' Hall, with expert doctors and bacteriologists in attendance, and reexpert doctors and bacteriologists in attendance, and re-solved to test all the oyster districts in the country.

Meanwhile, oysters are about as salable as spoiled hay, and nobody will look at them. Many oyster-growers must inevitably be ruined if the scare continues—as many were in the last scare, about ten years ago.

A few months past there were something like 20,000 pork-pies per day sold in the large towns of Britain, when suddenly came a drop of 18,000. At Derby, where the best pork-pies come from, over 220 people were struck down by promaine poisoning through eating these delicacies, and many of them died. Down went the trade all over the country to the extent of over 1500 per day.
In many places they could be bought—sixpenny and shilling ones—at a penny and twopence each while the stock lasted, and there were few buyers even at that price. There is no way of telling a pork-ple that will poison you from a harmless one; and the pies that started the trouble came from a thoroughly honest and reputable maker, and were altogether honest and reput-able pies. The deadly ptomaine descended on them, and illness and death were the result. The scare and the loss was only an unfortunate accident.

As to fish, there have been some extraordinary stamnot fetch a halfpenny apiece a few years ago, and were rotting in thousands for want of buyers. There was an epidemic of mackerel poisoning in London and several seaports, and so fierce was the revolt against them that fishmongers would not receive them at all, restaurants struck them out of their bills of fare, and fishermen found it was useless to catch them, except for them-

The strip of flesh that lies along the spine of a mackerel at certain times of the year is liable to suddenly develop a violent irritant poison, which will make anyone who eats the fish seriously ill, even if it does not kill him. It is a rare occurrence, however, this anyone who eats the his seriously in, even it is does not kill him. It is a rare occurrence, however, this poisoning, and the mackerel is usually a most wholesome fish. The safest plan is not to pick the backbone too clean. The "mackerel scare" cost the trade over f100,000. The average value of the year's mackerel catch

Bread made from Polish wheat afflicted with "grey mut" was distinctly dangerous a dozen years back; smut was distinctly dangerous a dozen years bara, and when about 150 people suddenly became ill the scare set in. A great many people took no notice; but a big alarmist section tried the unique measure of doing without bread altogether, as it was found almost impossible at first to be certain of not getting Polish wheat. There was a drop of about 15000 a week in the bread sold

I here was a drop of about 15000 a week in the bread sold in some districts, while others remained unaffected.

An altogether absurd scare, but a very big one, and a particularly unfortunate one for everybody concerned, was the "fright" over frozen meat that occurred not long ago. Several unexplained cases of poisoning occurred together, and some genius started the theory that they were due to the imported frozen beef and mutton.

Such an unreasoning name occurred that for a week on Such an unreasoning panic occurred that for a week or so hardly any meat of this kind, of which we use about f120,000 worth a week, was sold at all. Suddenly it came to light, through Dr. Latham Forbes's analysis, that the cases which caused the scare were the result of eating copper-tainted mussels, and the "fright" died as quickly as it arose

Mrs. Smith and Miss Brown were once the bosomest of bosom friends. In fact, Miss Brown was a constant visitor at the house of Mrs. Smith. She was staying with her as a guest one bitter cold frosty morning, and the two were going for a walk.

"Dearest," called Mrs. Smith from upstairs, "has Jane

"No. darling." Miss Brown replied, "yours are not here, but your husband's are."

TURKS NEVER CONQUERED. By a Special Contributor.

The valley narrowed, and the hills upon both sides crowded down so close to the river that there was scarcely space for road and stream. The importance of this defile as a means of defense had evidently been fully appreciated, for at commanding positions on both sides of the river were forts, and in the depths of the ravine, watch-houses. These had been built in the days when Turkey occupied the land, and the Montenegrins are making little effort to keep them in repair. Here in 1877, was the boundary between the two countries, or perhaps better the political dividing line, for the real boundary was where the Montenegrins could-stop the advance of the Turks.

In one of these periods of uncertain peace, the Sultan purchased from Montenegro the Valje Prodo, a valuable tract of the section. The purchase, according to the accredited boundary, was in the Turkish domain, the Sultan's representative paid the price demanded by the Montenegrins in order to seitle any further dis-pute regarding its possession. The next summer the ridge was covered with flocks that had been driven up from the lowlands and dotted with huts of the Monte negrin shepherds. The Turkish government remon-strated. The Montenegrins replied that although they had sold the "solid, unchanged land" they had not sold the grass "which is renewed each year." The feud beso intense between the people living on the border that as a last resort the Sultan was forced to buy the grass as well as the land, and build forts to protect the purchase.

A Historic Spot.

When we were through this gateway of rocks a great evel tract lay before us, with the Zeta dividing it into halves and parallel to the stream the roadway, a great yellowish streak that lost itself in the distance. On a rocky point that jutted out from a mountain wall stood the old castle of Supz, and around its base the town. From its position upon the cliff, with its btckground of mountains and the fertile valley in front, the town pre-sented a picturesque appearance. Nearer approach, however, gave it a dilapidated and sadly worn look. The ever, gave it a dispidated and sadily work look. The houses were all of the Turkish type and 200 or more of them were crowded within the walls. Two mosques remind of Turkish days, as did also the graveyard with its fallen, crumbling monuments. The old fortification, which from its position evidently controlled this part of the valley, is now used by the Montenegrins as a store-house for ammunition.

Spuz is one of the historic spots of Montenegro. It was Turkish and also remained so until it came to Montenegro through the treaty. To the Montenegrins with their mode of warfare and military equipment it was impregnable. Around its walls, however, raged the bloodiest of warfare, and many stories are told of the heroic deeds of the Black Mountain warriors. It was the scene of one of the most interesting pages of the Homeric entertainments furnished by the wander-ing poets of the land.

The Sultan, in 1856, determined to punish the Monte negrins for their defiance of his power, and dispatched an army for that purpose. They would have advanced into the heart of Montenegro before the people were aware of their foes having started, had they not been stopped near Spuz through the bravery of a village priest. As old man sitting on the steps of the flonse where this hero once lived, told us the story accompanying his monotonous sing-song by picking on the guzla. Radonic was the name of the priest. His wife dreamed that great dark clouds floated up from bloody dreamed that great dark clouds floated up from bloody Turkey and united in an outpouring over Spuz. She told her husband, and in the nighttime when the Turks came with torches to burn and with scimitars to murder, the people of the village were ready to receive them. The priest fought at the head of his parishioners them. The priest fought at the head of his parishioners until he fell exhausted from wonds. As he lay dying he begged his nephews to carry away his body that the Turks might not get his head, and ordered others to notify his countrymen of the advance of the enemy. The alarm was given and the invaders were driven back into the walls of Spuz.

We walked back down into the valley again and fol-lowed the roadway with the sun beating flercely down upon our heads. The fields were in a high state of cultivation, and little houses sometimes in the midst of a group of fruit trees and sometimes in the center of a little patch of cultivated land, were along the roadside. At the first village that we came to the next morning, we left the roadway and followed a path up through mountain meadows cut by hedges of wild plum trees and berry vines, and dotted with great mats of thickly growing, brilliant flowers. The Invisible Walls.

THE STORY OF A BROKEN PROMISE AND OF ONE FULFILLED.

By a Special Contributor.

N THE early part of the last century political conditions in Mexico were unsettled, revolutions frequent, no man secure in the possession of his own. At that time there stood an old house in the capital city at the western end of the Street of Palaces, an aristocratic mansion with richly-carved stone front and moss-grown waterspouts. It was even more fortresslike than its neighbors, for the heavy wooden shutters were never taken down or the massive door unbarred, except for a moment grudgingly.

One wild night in the rainy season, the whole house was given over as usual to mold, rats and solitude, ex-cept the kitchen, where the flicker of a cheap candle dimly figured an old man wrapped about in tattered gown and blanket. One would not look for the master of such a mansion in this part of his house, but there was no mistaking the wasted patrician features, the black eyes' commanding flash. A misshapen crone stood fanning a handful of charcoal burning feebly under a small earthen vessel.

The rain fell in sheets through the wild electric glare and, streaming from the stone waterspouts, filled in the pauses of the thunder with mourful cadences. At last pauses of the thunder with mourful cadences. At last the heavy brass knocker, sounding muffled and distant, made itself heard above the storm. Through an iron-grated aperture in the entrance door, aided by the light-ning, old Severa made out a tall work. ning, old Severa made out a tall young man striding back and forth impatiently in the storm, pausing only to redouble his efforts with the knocker. Softly closing the opening, she made her slow way back to the kitchen to ask her master for the key.

"Your lawyer nephew is without in the rain," she

"And a very good place for him," returned Don Orto turn upon their hinges for him."

Dark and handsome, Guillermo Peñasco bent respectfully to kiss his uncle's hand, taking in with scornful glance, meanwhile, the miserly surroundings.

"I have come," he said briefly.

"The vultures always hover over the dying," retorted the old man hitterly. A sharp cough tore at his throat and left him gasping.
"Well, what would you, Uncle? You sent me,

"You are my sister's child; so I sent for you, though I trust you not. Lawyers are sharks; government at-torneys worst of all. I trust no one but my son, Juan; him I drove from me by harshness, and now I must die

'I charge you to guard his inheritance for my Juan to. to find him and give him his own. Listen; a quarter of the gold in my strong chest shall be yours and that is pay enough for an honest man. As you are faithful to this trust zo may you prosper. If you betray me, the grave cannot hold me from coming back to make you curse your wage. Now, go!" commanded the fierce, shrill old voice breaking defiantly through the choking

That day a year later found the old house in new guise, the shutters down, the stately rooms builliant with light, liveried servants standing statuesque about the halls. Guillermo Peñasco was conducting his young bride through her new home.

"I am thinking, dear Guillermo," said the merry, sweet-faced girl, "of your miser uncle. Wouldn't he turn in his grave if he knew how many candles we are burning ton!ght?"

'He would, yes," answered the bridegroom absently. "His good-for-nothing son who robbed and abused him deserves no sympathy, yet I cannot help wondering where he is-tonight. Have you any idea what ever became of him?" "No, beloved, my inquiries have been fruitless." Guillermo's efforts to end the subject seemed ineffectual.

"But your uncle loved you like a son and you were consolation of his last lonely years."

"I—I suppose so, Esperanza."

"You are too modest, my Guillermo; but that is the way with the great of heart—oh! what was that?"

He heard a faint footfail close behind them as they traversed the long drawing-room. He saw the candles burn dim and blue, more eerie than darkness, and felt a strange swift rush of icy air. Ringing the bell sharply, he ordered a wran for his wife and ware well. he ordered a wrap for his wife and more candles, but neither wrap nor candles could restore her lost reass.

In the days that followed pictures leaped from their frames, statues flung themselves from their niches, and always there was that soft, shuffling footfall following each inmate about the house. It came that no one crossed a room without turning to look behind him. Although this happened a hundred times a day, yet he must still cast that backward, shuddering glance. Guilermo's nerves were badly shaken and he saw that the strain was killing Esperanza. Panic seized the servants and they fled.

"We will go to Paris," he said, the day they were thus left alone. "We will start tomorrow. While we are away this old dungeon shall come down and a fine new house rise in its place."

"Not here! Guillermo," she pleaded, "oh, no, not here! Some one has been wicked here and the curse falls on us who are innecent."

But in Paris Esperanza's health was restored, fears almost forgotten. They returned to a new house a stately dwelling, with a gracious, welcoming air. The They returned to a new house, first month was joyously uneventful. Apparently all ghostly influences had accompanied the débris of the old structure anniversary of Guillermo's interview with his uncle found the young people at the table in the cherry, luxurious, new dining-room. Esperanza was happy and chaited merrily. Guillermo responded with a gay air. The waiter, bringing in the soup, stumbled accountably and spilled half his burden.

"I hit my foot against something Senor," he said, respectfully, in answer to his master's wrathful exclamation Guillermo looked incredulously at the polished floor. 'It was here, Senor." He stooped and then sprang up in shuddering fright.

"What idiocy is this?" kneeling, however, to feel for himself. He snatched back his hand as though stung, them with grim determination he calmly investigated the nature and extent of the invisible obstruction. Something about three inches high and two feet wide; rough and hard with the unmistakable feel of stone and me tar met his hand the whole room's width.

He turned to find that Esperanza had fainted, nor did she revive until the fresh night air blew on her face in the carriage which bore her swiftly away. Lying in her husband's arms, she made him promise that neither of them should ever enter that place of dread and evil again. Guillermo took his wife to her relative in the content of the tives in another part of the city and nursed her tenderly some days

When anxiety for her lessened, the old house drew when anxiety for her lessened, the out house drew him back with fatal power. As he entered, the morning sun made rainbows in the spray of the patio fountain; the roces swayed blithely. Perhaps the whole thing had been some wild trick and whirl of thought stimu-lated by his uncle's absurd threat. It must be so!

With this assurance he entered the drawing-room; three feet of unseen wall opposed him! The barrier in the dining-room also increased in height. No room was without its ghostly obstruction.

He snatched a notebook from his pocket and made a rough plan; then studied the impeding lines. What was thia! The old house rising again within the new! Powerless, beaten, he staggered to the street. He could seek no touch of human sympathy; his guilty secret made that impossible.

Fearing for his canity, pledged never to return, yet again and again under the spell of horrible fascination the grewsome thing had cast upon him, he slipped away from Esperanza on some pretext of business to the ghastly reconstruction that made his dwelling un-inhabitable. The walls rose steadily until one day they were so high that he climbed over them with difficulty. Exhausted, reckless, despairing, he threw himself up a couch in what had been his study. A stupor, half sleep, half swoon, fell upon him,

*He awoke and pulled himself together miserably. This must be his last visit; darkness was falling; Ra-peranza would be awaiting him anxiously. He pu; out his hands to the wall. Where was the top? He could not reach it! He sprang upon his desk in a panic. Still beyond his grasp! He flung a chair upon the desk and leapt up only to find that it had attained the cell-ing while he slept. Wildly cursing, he beat it with bleeding hands and battered the chairs against it.

Then, for Guillermo Peñasco was a proud man, he turned from the barrier and would make no further

"Uncle, you have your revenge," he murmured.

Lighting a taper on the desir, he scated himself on the couch, with his head between his hands. His thoughts were gentler now. He wished that he might exchange all the gold in his uncle's chest for one farewell kiss from Esperanza. He tried to recall a childish prayer, but his guilty soul abhorred the vision.

He could make restitution, there was yet time. were lands, houses, bonds, gold, that he should have assumed this awful sense of guilt to possess them!

Guillermo went to his desk and wrote a simple, brief confession of the forged will, of his cousin's return only to be shown the will and driven away again, he knes not where. To right this wrong would take all hi private fortune, but what of that?

He laid the papers on his desk so as to be read easily from the other side of the transparent wall, and was conscious of feeling strangely light-hearted for a doomed man. Now he could say the little prayer. He repeated it over and over. He would sleep again, and if God so pleased, he might wake in his angel mother's arms. But Esperanza, his gentle loving wife! Leave her! he flung out his arms in anguish and they touched— nothing! He took a step forward in bewilderment, another. There was no barrier. He was free!

Guillermo went slowly into the street. A friend who met him in full lamp glare stared curiously and passed on without recognition. Referring to the encounter he said that he had met a young man with white hair, un-known to him, who bore the look of having seen strange things in a far country, the vision of which would be with him to the end. HOW LITTLE NORA WAS WON BACK то Нельти.

By a Special Contributor.

IVE-YEAR-OLD NORA had always been a contrast to the other Riley children. She to the other Riley children. She was number four, and the only serious one. When the others ran races or played mud pies, she sat on the steps of the tenement and looked on gravely. She never quarreled as the others did; yet somehow they all had a strong love for this quiet little sister, and if one of them received a stray flower or a pretty pebble, it was gener-ally presented to Nora. She showed her appreciation of these by holding them tight in her little thin hand and fixing her serious gaze upon them. The other chil-dren expressed their delight by calling each other's at-tention to "Nora's pretties." Artistic gifts were so few in the Riley household that the treasures of each had to be enjoyed by all.

Father Rîley earned only $28 a month as street sweeper, and when Mother Rîley had paid eight of these dollars for rent of the three little rooms that made their home. she did not have money enough to get her six children the food that would make them rosy and-fat. However, they had never been sickly children, for they spent most of their days out on the street; and the California sun-shine made even crowded Tehama street a fairly healthful playground throughout the year. They got a great deal of happiness out of life, and the Irish smiles played continually on every face but Nora's.

When the measles followed a Decoration Day picnic, the other children took it as cheerfully as they did their street tumbles. After a ten days' siege, Mary and Denis and Jole and even wee Katie and baby Julia were all frisking about as gayly as ever, but it lingered with Nora until there was hardly an ounce of flesh to soften the hard bed for the poor, tired little bones. The measles are not much fun, even when you have a comfortable bed all to yourself and a large room flooded with fresh air and warm sunshine and a mother who has plenty of time to nurse her child and enough money to get the right food and medicine; but it is far more serious when you lack all these, as Nora did. Her room was so tiny that the sun's rays, which entered it for but a short time in midday, found only three feet of dancing space between the cot at the left wall, which held Denis and Jole, and the one against the right wall wherein Mary and Nora slept at the top with wee Katie cuddled at their feet. In here, Nora lay quiet and wasted away until there seemed nothing left but her great serious blue eyes. Miss Beamish, the district nurse who devoted her life to helping the needy in this part of the city, felt worried over the little girl. One day, Miss Beamish came in great excitement to the Riley rooms. "Hurrah," for the summer cottage," she exclaimed. "Now, Mrs. Riley, we'll have Nora well soon." Then she explained that some wealthy friends had given her a fund. dancing space between the cot at the left wall, which plained that some wealthy friends had given her a fund to keep twelve convalescent children in the country for two months. She had rented a cottage nestling in the hills across the bay, with rooms enough for twelve children, a nurse, and a housekeeper. It was surrounded by a large yard and an orchard. She called it "the sum-mer cottage," and the first children were to move over on the first of August, Nora among them.

Great was the excitement in the Riley family during the week before Nora was to leave home. Mother Riley washed her scanty lot of underwear, and made over one of Mary's dresses so as to give her a change. Father Riley borrowed some money to get her a new pair of shoes, and, at night, he told wonderful stories of the country where he was a boy, of cows and pigs, of shamrock and hawthorn blooms. The children all regretted that they had gotten well, and wished that scarlet fever would swood down and makes or any other dread disease would swoop down and make them fit candidates for the convalescent home.

When the 1st of August actually arrived, Mother Riley left eleven-year-old Mary in charge of the other childreh, and with Nora on one arm and her clothes on the other, took the street car to meet Miss Beamish at the ferry. When she had given Nora to the faithful nurse, Mother Riley walked home, crying most of the

The group of children with Miss Beamish felt a little like crying at first. They were all strangers to each other and were momentarily shy. But when the boat got fairly started and the sea gulls came sweeping almost to the deck's rail, they soon became acquainted. By the time the train landed them at their destination, after whirling them through tree-dotted hills, over which roamed gentle looking cows, they had formed friendships. As Nora was the only one who had to be carried, they all became devoted to her, and directed her attention to all the wonders they were passing.

The first day in the cottage was a wonder time to all of them. There were trees with bright yellow peaches and dark red plums to be had for the gathering, and and dark red plums to be had for the gathering, and other trees, which they soon learned were oaks and locusts, to cast shade over the roses, geraniums and fuchsias of the garden. There was a wide porch, all vine-screened, around three sides of the cottage, and here cots awaited any tired little body. And then in the bath-room—they laughed aloud at the extravagance—a separate towel for each and a new toothbrush.

There were more laughe when the milk man celled.

There were more laughs when the milk man called Miss Beamish ordered four gallons of milk to be left each morning and four again in the afternoon. Eight gallons a day! The children gaped at each other. The milkman's honest Swiss face broke into a broad "Have you an orphan asylum here, Miss?"

"Oh, no. I've just some little friends who have come to the country to get well, and we want the best milk your cows give."

"Well, you'll get it, Miss, and I hope dey'll soon look and he beamed on the children.

They all smiled in return, and as he climbed on his wagon, Albert, the boy whose club feet had just been operated on, shouled "Hurrah for Milkie!" and the other weak voices took up the cry, "Rah for Milkie!" From that moment "Milkie" was prime favorite with them, and each visitor received full accounts of him, his wagon, his horses, the rides he gave them, and, above all, his good, rich milk—"eight whole gallons a day." They never could get used to the magnificance of this idea, but never a drop of the eight gallons went year. to waste.

Albert was a masterhand at nicknames, all of which ended in "le." Soon all the party were bearing titles of his coinage. Louise, the strong-loving housekeeper was "Cleanle," because of her tidiness; Mamle, the oldended in "le." est girl, whose cough had frightened Miss Beamish, was "Grandle," because she exclaimed, "Isn't it grand?" at "Grandle," because she exclaimed, "Isn't it grand?" at whatever pleased her. Nora was "Gravie" because she always looked so grave. Mamie tried to persuade Albert to change Nora's title, saying, "Give her a prettier name, because we all love her;" but Albert retorted, "And who don't love gravy? Bet I do." All his followers chorused, "Bet we do, and lots of it." And so the little blue-eyed girl remained "Gravie" throughout the

The lovely times the children had at the cottage; the sweet unselfish spirit they showed toward each other; the strength that they gained which enabled them to return to San Francisco and make room for other con-valescents, leaving only little Mamile, Albert and Nora there for the entire two months, would make another story, or two, or a half dozen, but just now we are reciting only Nora's tale.

"Milkle" liked all the children and took them for rides in turns; but for little Nora he seemed to have a special gentleness. He noted every improvement with expressed pleasure. Once he brought her a little wooden dog that his wife had brought from Switzerland, and the child kept it by her, day and night. It worried him that she did not laugh and romp as the other children soon did. "It isn't natural, dis Gravie," he said. "Children should ren like de caives and de colts."

His good Swiss wife came with him one day, and they took Nora for a ride. Mrs. "Milkie" held her close on her lap and made her so comfortable that she floated off into sleep. When she awakened Mrs. "Milkie" was weeping, which impressed Nora so much that she raised her hand and patted her friend's cheek. Mrs. "Milkie" hugged her closer and kissed her, and then she and her nusband laughed together.

Toward the end of September, Mrs. "Milkle" came Toward the end of September, Mrs. "Milkie" came again, and this time they took Miss Beamish out to their home, five miles away. That night the nurse wrote to Mother Riley that the good Mr. and Mrs. "Milkie" wanted to keep Nora with them a year to see if the country air would not make her a smiling, healthy child. She asked Mother Riley to come over the next Sunday and see them and their home for herself.

Mother Riley came: and the little Swiss dairy, which was really very humble, impressed her favorably. She cried over Mrs. "Milkie's" story of her own little daughter who had died, and consented to leave Nora with them for a year. "But only fer the year, ye mind. I'll not be a-giving up my own girlie. She probably missed the children, but "aunt" and "uncle," as she was taught to call Mr. and Mrs. "Milkie," were so kind that she missed no love. And then the cows and pigs and chickens and ducks were so wonderful, and even the turkey gobbler was interesting to watch, if she was far enough from him.

Mr. "Milkie" took her on his milk round, whenever the weather permitted, and taught her to drive. Mrs. "Milkie" made her warm clothes as winter approached, and gradually the good care brought rosy change sturdy legs that could trot around from

His mother, on her deathbed, expressed a wish that her boy should become a school-teacher, and in deference to her request as well as to a natural love for the work, his every effort was devoted to preparing himself to be an educator. From the age of 7 until he was 15, his spare hours before and after school were employed in washing dishes in hotels, shoeing horses, emplored in washing dishes in hotels, salveing notices, asing wood and performing farm labor. At 15, filled with strong young life, ambition and enthusiasm, he actualled to procure a higher education, so with a capital of ten cents and a new pair of shoes he started cat in the world. The shoes were preclous, and to me them he tied them to a stick which he carried a his shoulder and went barefooted, in spite of the sill and rocky road.

After a long and difficult journey he arrived in Farm-hriza, Ct., where he won the good will of John Chrift, the editor of the town paper and superintendent of the Farmington Academy. This good man gave him a tweeks' order on a boarding house and admission to be sademy, with the understanding that he should and the news office before and after school. Started for California.

About this time rumors of the great wealth and extent et California's gold fields were floating through the East and thousands of hopeful enthusiasts were leaving their homes for the far-away land of untold riches. It was then that Mr. Pelton conceived the idea of coming West and laying the foundation for educational advancement the new territory. He told his hopes, plans and am-ments to a number of influential friends who became ach interested in the project and helped him in per-citing and carrying out his proposed arrangements, secon Moses Grant, one of the celebrated philanthroto moses Grant, one of the celebrated primarino-tis of Boston, who was the friend of every good en-rate presented Mr. Pelton with a fine collection of the charts, maps, etc., while Rev. Edward Beecher at R. V. Whittabone subscribed the steamer passage of Mr. Polish and wife. But the most treasured gift of Coarses. The bell was hung high in the rigging of the this which they sailed, and merrily rung out the last and the half hours during the entire voyage was the Horn.

The trip was uneventful, and in due time the ship had into San Francisco Bay, where anchor was cast. The of every nationality clambered about the ship purposers who wished to so achors. is the which they demanded for rowing a person and, only one hundred yards away. At this time help he had only $1.50 to his name, but after some tring he got a boatman to accept the small fee, and thus succeeded in reaching terra firms once more. Not a cent did he have, and what to do he didn't know. Worked in the Harbor.

For some time he stood on the strange, rocky shore, gazing at the tangle of ships that filled the harbor, ships from civilized and uncivilized regions and representing every nation on the globe, ships as helpless as birds without wings, for all the sailors had deserted and rushed for the gold fields leaving their respective captains in an unsolvable dilemma. The cargoes could not be unloaded, nor the ships sail from port without crews, and there the great vessels lay stranded in the bay and tossed about by the restless tide. As Mr. Pelton stood looking, trying to devise some scheme to make a few dellars, he saw a man running down the beach toward him, who, when within hailing distance, called out: "For God's sake, can't you lend me a hand? I've got a whole cargo of goods stacked on the beach, and the tide will wash them away if I can't get help."

The man was hatless and coatless and breathless with excitement, and as he offered wages of $3 an hour Mr. Pelton was only too glad to get to work. By the time the tide turned the goods were all high and dry above high-water mark, and Mr. Pelton had earned a goodly number of dellars. A few dollars, however, were of little consequence in those times of financial tempests, when the humblest board shack rented for $150 a month, when flour was $20 a barrel, potatoes 40 cents a pound. butter $1.50 a pound, and wood, which was packed about the streets on burros, was sold by the Mexican venders for $2 a sack.

A Good Commercial Transaction.

But fortune was amiable toward the determined promoter of education, and as the seamen had all deserted the ships and rushed for the mines, Mr. Pelton had no the saips and rushed for the mines, and the difficulty in earning from $10 to $15 a day in helping to unload the vessel in which he came around the Horn, while his wife was given $5 a day for acting in the capacity of stewardess. The captain had an enormous quantity of rice on board for which there seemed to be no market, and when Mr. Pelton offered to pay him 5 no market, and when Mr. Pelton offered to pay him 5 cents a pound the captain gladly consented. The rice was loaded on a barge and taken ashore, where Mr. Pelton succeeded in disposing of it at 11 cents a pound, making $600 clear profit from the deal. This streak of good luck temporarily cleared the clouds from the financial sky, and Mr. and Mrs. Pelton moved ashore and ensconced themselves in a $150 a month shack on Market street, which at that time was lined with ramshackle buildings and was muddy and generally disheveled in appearance. heveled in appearance.

Mr. Pelton's next move was to talk to the towns-people and find out incidentally what encouragement and assistance he might expect in establishing a school, but in almost every instance the suggestion met with laughter, derision or indifference. As the residences were small, the most convenient place for the children to play was in the streets, and there they luxuriated in the mud like polliwogs, the parents in most instances being too busily engrossed in the race for gold to take notice of the doings of their offspring. A tiny school-house had been built by a few enterprising citizens, but it was impossible to obtain a teacher at any price as everybody was either making enormous fortunes in the mines or expected to make them, so the idea of a school was considered a glorious failure and abandoned, while the little building was turned into a jail which was liberally patronized by criminals of every type, who were frequently treated to the rigorous discipline of the lynch cure. Finally, when Mr. Pelton found parties who seemed interested in his cherished idea of a free school it was impossible to find a carpenter to put up a building, as they were all after gold, but the question was set-tled at last by the Baptists offering the use of their lit-tle church, which was turned into an impromptu educational institution during week days, with Mr. Pelton in charge, and thus it was that the school system took root in California. The First School Opened.

One of the most eventful as well as one of the hap-lest mornings of Mr. Pelton's life was on December 26, 1849, when the merry, musical chimings of the bell which he had brought from the far East called the juvenile population of San Francisco from their mischief and their mud pies, and announced the first session of California's initial school. Only three pupils were en rolled the opening day, but the idea of education so advanced in popularity that the little room was soon overcrowded and new quarters had to be found. Although many men were easily making fortunes in a day. Mr. Pelton never hesitated nor wavered for an instant in his self-imposed duty of developing and encouraging the educational facilities of the State. His services were given gratuitously and unselfishly to the work, without consideration of time, health or money. The first school law of the State of California was drawn by Mr. Pelton, and was adopted in the Legislature at San José in 1851. In course of time Mr. Pelton's health failed, and thinking outdoor life might be beneficial he rented a farm some distance from San Francisco, to which he moved. After enduring endless hardships and privations resulting from poor crops, he returned to the city, feeling assured that he could resume his place in the school—his school. But he was doomed to experience disappointment, for the teacher who had taken his place and who was receiving an exorbitant salary as superintendent, coolly refused him admittance and practically liberals," which was presented by Henry W. r. who was at that time a prominent member of the bell was hung high in the rigging of the the was a superintendent, coolly refused him admittance and practically banged the door in his face. Heartbroken, discouraged, penniless, Mr. Pelton sought work, and the only place he could find employment was among the laborers at the water-front, where he toiled night and day, in sun ment, for the teacher who had taken his place and the water-front, where he tolled night and day, in sun and rain, unloading heavy barrels, boxes and lumber from ships and barges. His farming speculation had left him heavily in debt and the struggle for a meager ex istence was severe. At this time his first child was born, in a room over a stable, the only place he could call home, so that sickness added more strenuous burdens. One night Mr. Pelton, all mud and rags, was plodding through the rain and darkness to his poverty-stricken home, when he was met by Hon. A. A. Salover, an earnest friend of his previous educational work, who had not heard of his return to San Francisco, of his exclusion from the school or of his deplorable financial condition. He was amazed to find his friend in such straits, and when Mr. Pelton had told him all, he lost no time in using his influence in reinstating Mr. Pelton in the school as superintendent at a salary of $500 a month, and so the good work so bravely begun under difficulties was continued. Mr. Pelton is also said to be the father and founder of the reform school in California.

Though outstripped in the race in life, though engulied in sickness, poverty and sorrow, Mr. Pelton still takes pleasure in recalling former pupils, many of whom are eminent in State and national legislative halls, or have become prominent in various professions—men to be proud of—men who have made the State famous by their wit and brilliancy.

Ever since the first school session in California, when there was but one teacher and three pupils, education has made vigorous strides and at the present time there are 7820 teachers and 272,009 children in the State of California. HELEN LUKENS JONES.

THE LITTLE GIRL CHOIR.

The boy choir has been an accepted organization for years, but recently there has come into existence a fair rival—the little girl choir. It is an innovation and bids fair to become as popular as its male competitor.

In the City of New York there are now half a dozen of these little girl choirs. Perhaps the best known is that of St. Mark's in Stuyvesant Square, one of the oldest Episcopal churches in the city, having been more than a century ago in what was then Peter Stuy-vesant's apple orchard at the head of the Bowery. It was from these trees that the famous thoroughfare derived its name.

The little girl choir of St. Mark's was organized two years ago this Lent and at once sprang into such popularity that it has been retained ever since. It numbers a score of tiny maidens from seven to eleven years of age. Clad in their demuge caps and gowns a more pic-turesque group it would be hard to find. And then to hear those cherubs sing! The sweet, childish voices chant reverently and devoutly the processional, their leader conducting them through the difficult measures of the "Magnificat" or "Venite."

Grace Church, on Broadway, also has one of these

Grace Church, on Broadway, also has one of these diminutive girl choirs, its members being even younger than those of St. Mark's. Any afternoon at 4 o'clock, when the bells chime out the summons to vespers, these infantile singers, ranging from four to nine years of age, softly chant the evensong. The choir is made up from the day nursery of the church and is composed of the little ones who are left there to be cared for during the day, while their mothers are at work earning their daily bread. Their vestments are spotless white pinafore gowns with quaint Duich caps.

The Church of the Epiphany also has a little girl choir and there is another at St. Michael's, in Brooklyn. Until very recently these baby-girl choirs were a feature of the Lenten season only, but they have proved so popular that it is evident they have come to stay.

so popular that it is evident they have come to stay. In the spring of 1901, not long after Easter, the first girl choir festival ever held in this country was given at St. Mark's.

EASTER KID GLOVES. "La Cigale" Kid Gioves—3-clasp style, black and colors; Cable sewed; embroidered backs; warranted and fitted; no better

MONG the many interesting sights in Jerusalem there is one most beloved to the hearts of Protestants and to which they cling with much asarance and confidence. It is the remarkable little-hill alled Golgotha or "Gordon's Calvary"—so named because the general was among the first to express his spinion that it was the true site of the crucifixion.

Golgotha. "THE PLACE OF A SKULL," NOW PROBABLY LOCATED. By a Special Contributor.

Named for It: Shape.

As one walks outside the Damascus Gate one cannot but be attracted by the strange resemblance of the knoll to a skull, and it at once brings to one's mind the words of the Gospel: "And they bring Him unto the place Golgotha, which is, being interpreted, the place of a skull." There is no other elevation or mound like it anywhere outside the walls of Jerusalem, nor inside elther. It belongs to the Mohammedans, but they would not have intentionally transformed it into not have intentionally transformed it into the resemblance of a human skull. It must have assumed that shape long before the Turk was heard of. A remarkable fact about this Calvary is that the Jews call it to this very day, "the place of stoning or of the execution of criminals."

Then, too, one realizes, as one stands on the top of the hill that everything taking place there would be visible. hill, that everything taking place there would be visible from the streets and houses, and from the ramparts of the temple area, and would serve as a warning and terror to malefactors and rebels against the authority of proud priests and corrupt Pharisees. Tasse facts seem to mark this hill as the veritable spot where the world's redemption was accomplished.

Confirmatory Facts.

Another important point in its favor is that it is close to the Damascus gate leading to the then Gentile or "profane" world—Samaria and Phenicia. Not far off are the sacrificial ashes discovered a few years ago, which prove that this neighborhood was considered unclean. When they were first found by the builders it was supposed that they were the remains of some soap factory, but on close inspection it was found that they were full of small, charred bones, showing clearly that they were from the sacrifices in the Temple, according to Leviticus vi, 10 and 11: "The priest shall carry forth the ashes without the camp." Their location corresponds with that mentioned in Jeremiah xxxl, 40.

This hill of Golgotha is situated about 300 yards north

This hill of Golgotha is situated about 300 yards north of Damascus Gate, not distant from the Pretorium, Piof Damascus Gate, not distant from the Pretorium, Pilate's judgment scat, and close to an undoubtedly ancient wall of the city. A place chosen by the Jews for public execution would be selected for its prominence, visibility and easy access, and on the defled and polluted part, outside the city walls. All these characteristics point to this hill as the very Golgotha mentioned in the sacred narrative.

From our Mission House windows in Jerusalem we could see this interesting and sacred hill and it appealed.

could see this interesting and sacred hill and it appealed to us more and more as the true site by its striking contour, with those strange, eyeless sockets giving the rocky mound a perfect resemblance to a human skull.

On one occasion we had the privilege of visiting this hill of sacred tragedy with a lady who had traveled in a party with Petrie, the great archaeologist. She was much impressed with the site, and pointed out to us certain signs which she recognized to be those of an ancient Jebusite place of execution.

She remarked that such places in ancient days were usually used for the same purpose from age to age, though passing through different hands. She also first pointed out to us some interesting features which we had not noticed before and which gave the hill a deeper it is in the larger half standing on the hill side, very apparently having been did the larger half standing on the hill sop.

Millions for Decorations.

GREAT SUMS SPENT FOR FLOWERS FOR EASTER.

By a Special Contributor.

ASTER is conceded to be the most brilliant of the many church festivals celebrated in American citles, surpassing even Christmas in lavishness of musical programmes, extravagence of decoration and point

Millions of dollars are spent each year for Easter lilies and allelulas, yet paradoxically, the more wealthy the congregation, the less the money which is paid out by the treasurer. This is due to the general custom of making Easter Sunday the occasion of memorials to the dead. In fashionable churches like St. Bartholomew's, New York, where the Vanderbilt's worship, the floral decorations will represent several thousand dollars, but of this sum, only the potted plants are paid for by the committee in charge, and these are merely rented for the day. The flowers are sent by the Vanderbilts. memory of those of their family who have died in the church. Sometimes these memorials come in the form of set pieces, such as pillows, harps and other funeral of-ferings, but so skilfully are they arranged by the decorators, that the work, when completed, shows only an admirably massed chancel of green and white.

How the Decoration is Done.

Bermuda lilies, hyacinths, white azaleas, narcissus and lilies of the valley are the most popular flowers for de-orative purposes, but even white roses and carnations are not despised when the prices of all flowers soar skyward

The work of decoration begins on Saturday afternoon and is generally in the hands of professional decorators and florists, assisted or hindered, as the case may be, by a committee of the church people. In the Episcopal churches, the committee consists of what is known as the altar guild, while in the Catholic churches, the work is done by the aisterhoods. The ceremony is ac-complished with much reverence, and those who make the rounds of the Catholic churches at this time have opportunity to study the exquisite workmanship in e laces used in decorating the altars, which can never be seen during the crush of Easter Sunday. The finest laces owned by a church are reserved for the Easter ser-vices, and often the vells used to drape the figures on the various altars are worth a small fortune in them

At the conclusion of the last service on Sunday, the flowers are removed, and they are sorted for distribu-tion by a committee. In churches where guilds are formed to minister to the sick, these workers have first right to the flowers, and the rest are distributed to the various hospitals. The palms and ferns rented by the florists are removed on Monday unless the week following Easter is to be marked by a number of church weddings, in which case arrangements are frequently made for the decorations to stand.

A Half-million Dollars for Decorations in These Cities.

A florist who has stores in New York, Chicago and Philadelphia states that fully $200,000 will be spent in chancel decorations in New York churches, $150,000 in Chicago churches, and a like sum in Philadelphia.

This includes all sorts and conditions of congregations, from the mission chapel where an expenditure of $25 or $50 is made only after most mature deliberation, to edifices like St. George's, where J. Pierpont Morgan will pass the silver plate for Easter offerings, and where the chancel will be completely hidden by lilies and azaleas at $5 a plant, hyacinths at half the price and cut flowers beside which the decorations at a ball or dinner sink into financial insignificance.

The Wealthy Church's Easy Task.

The wealthier the church, the more simple does the choir master find the problem of arranging the Easter music. His singers are kept up to the highest possi-ble standard for every service, and he makes no special effort for Easter Sunday, except in an appropriate lection of music. So perfectly are his singers drilled for chorus work that the introduction of additional voices would injure, not improve, the ensemble work. Chorus singers in wealthy churches are paid enough to make their regular attendance an object.

Students of singing make up the majority of these choirs and the standard of music demanded in a con-gregation of wealth is such that it could not be improved for special occasions. Moreover, the soloists are best obtainable, so the choir master finds that he has little to plan except the actual musical numbers. Even here much latitude is denied him. Certain hymns and choruses are demanded on this day, including the triumphant hymn, "Jesus Christ is Risen Today, Alle-luia," and the magnificent choral, "The Hallelujah Chorus," from Handel's "Messiah." It is a daring soloist who will elect to sing a new aria pushed by sor enterprising publisher when a member of the congreg tion who contributes her hundreds each year to the sup-port of the choir sends word that she would like "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth" sung at the morning service. The choir masters admit that the new Easter music is ephemeral, and what was placed on the market last year will not be heard in the churches next Sunarpist of 'celloist, or both, throughout the year, and these may be augmented by other stringed instruments for Easter, otherwise the choir remains as usual.

Grand Opera Stars Sing Gratuitously.

On the other hand, the choir master who is compelled make more or less of a splurge on Easter. He is allowed funds to secure a noted soloist or two, perhaps a harpist. It is in regard to the latter that he has most trouble. There are not enough harpists in the average city to supply the demedi for this great festival of music. They are engaged long in advance, and are paid a much higher figure than the soloists. A satisfactory soloist can be secured for $20, but higher prices are times are paid for "names." For instance, if a For instance, if a good at opera company is playing at one of the theaters, tenor or basso may be secured for the Easter solos light opera at a church. When a grand opera singer is heard, his or her solo is an offering, without money and without ice, to_the church.

Where the choir master must reorganize his workers on a more elaborate scale for this one day, his task is arducus and involves long and tedious rehearsals, even though the music selected is of the lightest order.

churches where boy choirs are employed, the old English music, notably that written by Sir John Stainer, is selected as lending itself more easily to the choral style of the English church. If a choir master inclines to the work of American composers, he selects the Easter music written by Horation Parker, Arthur Foote of George W. Chadwick

Why Easter Music is Disappointing.

In speaking of Easter music, a noted choir master

"The occasional church goer who imagines he is hearing especially fine music when he attends the Easter service is greatly mistaken. Frankly, I am always more dissatisfied with our music on that day than on any other Sunday of the year. The great throng in the church particularly that resiless tide of subtresses. church, particularly that restless tide of sightwhich comes and goes, distracts the singers, and the heavy air, which rests over the entire church, destroys the purity of tone. This comes partially from the large number of the people in the body of the church and partly from the heavy odors of the flowers massed in the chancel. My choir is necessarily packed into the midst of this perfume, and I have known young wo to faint under its powerful influence.

Then, too, my singers work their hardest on this day, because we have an extra service, beginning with a full choral service at 7 o'clock in the morning. Very often members of my choir living at a distance have a light breakfast before coming to the church, take a second breakfast after the first service, and even eat their mid-day meal at a near-by restaurant. By the close of the afternoon service they are exhausted.

"At churches which have only two services the strain is lighter, but I must reiterate that the average choir is not heard at its best on this day. There is something in the air beside flowers, perhaps it is general excite-ment, which creeps into the music and makes it less ecclesastic than it should be on this, the most solema and beautiful of church festivals."

Protecting Parishioners from the Sight-seers.

Despite the frank admission of weakness in Easter music, the average sight-seer will sally forth Easter Sunday with the unshaken expectation of hearing something quite out of the ordinary. There will be thousands of him struggling for entrance into the fashionable churches of every denomination.

To protect parishoners against the Easter invaders, the former are admitted at a single entrance, where they file past men connected with the congregation who know embers by sight. The other entrances to the church to the general public until five minutes before the service is to begin. After this, regular parishoners must take their chances with the seeth-ing mob which is risking its Easter finery to gain an entrance, for then no pews are reserved. Other churches issue cards, which are distributed not only to parish-oners but to privileged individuals to whom the courtesy is considered due.

In the very large edifices in the larger cities, and especially in New York, only those well in front hear the Easter sermon, for there is a perpetual stream of sightseers coming and going. To the individual accustomed to life on the European continent, this floating congregation is quite a matter of course, but to the American ccustomed to the congregation's remaining seated during the entire service, the peripatetic throng seem tinctly irreverent.

for vines than almost any expenditure he is likely to make for his garden.

With the use of the Mission style of architecture it is often desirable to find a vine which will cling readily to a smooth surface. Such a one is the well-known Ampelopsis Veltchii, a very strong grower, whose foliage in the fall takes on delightful red and copper-colored hues. The enly fault that can be found with the Ampelopsis is that it is deciduous, and has a rather long period of leaflessness. To my mind, however, the delilopsis is that it is decided, and has a rather long period of leaflessness. To my mind, however, the delicate tracery of the bare limbs of this vine are very beautiful outlined on the wall, and the great beauty of the longer season of its growth is sufficient compensation for the waiting.

The Use of the Vine.

To those who wish a vine that is practically an evergreen I can recommend nothing better than Bignonia Tweediana, which clings fast to either wood or stone, has a brilliant green foliage, and bright, attractive gold-trained high.

The Vine-clad Pergola.

I .referred last week to the availability of the pergola for the climbing rose, Beauty of Glazenwood whose color seems to grow more vivid when the bla soms are spread on the flat surface to receive the warm kisses. Another vine that takes kindly to treatment is the Bougainvillea, and especially is treatment is the Bougainvillea, and especially is the true of the brilliant red variety more recently introduced to this part of the State, Bougainvillea latering a much more pleasing color in a general landscape than the more common Bougainvillea spectabilis which has to be placed very carefully lest its peculiar magenta shades kill the color of every other blossom in your garden. Quality the finest example of the use of the pergola, however, which I have seen is that at the residence of J. Kleine of Lakeside, Cal. There are other vines runnitover this pergola, but the chief delight of all, who in its the exquisitely graceful Wire Vine, Muchlenber alba. This vine is much more commonly used in Nuthern California than in the south, but it has been apply demonstrated that it will withstand even the winds of the summer season in our interior vallen and anywhere near the coast there is no drawback its perfection. The small, delicate leaf, the fine blus stem, and the massing of the streamers remind one of the most delicate ferns, and I can think of no more refreshing or beautiful vine for the draping of a summer retreat such as the porch or pergola, than this Muslembertin As Latender its shades at Mr. Kleine's as the summer at the coast them the state of the latender its shades at Mr. Kleine's as the summer at the state of the state of the summer states as the porch or pergola, than this Muslembertin As Latender its shades at Mr. Kleine's as the summer states as the summer states at Mr. Kleine's as the summer states and summer s freshing or beautiful vine for the draping of a summeretreat such as the porch or pergola, than this Muellenbeckia. As I sat under its shade at Mr. Kleine's one warm day last summer, and looked out into the shipmering hase of heat that hung over lovely Lokesia and then my eyes came back to the deep, cool green of the Wire Vline, with just a glimpse of the sky beyond and heard the song and "small talk" of the linnets nessing in the depths of the vine overhead. I found a very lasting restrictions. lasting restfulness.

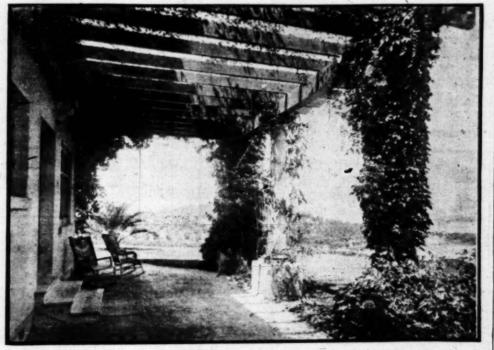

Sweet-scented Flowering Vines.

Hung round the lattices its fragrant trumpeta."
A vine-clad cottage without a honeysuch over some window or door would be wellit would be like some very modern heat affair with most of the sentiment left on The coral honeysuckle is pretty to look at, the pink viriety is a free bloomer and very graceful on a trellit but the honeysuckle that appeals to the heart is the one whose perfumes fill the air from August to March and whose blossoms are first of snowy whiteness, phriturn to all shades of cream and pale yellow as the come out to full bloom. It is a clean, tidy sort of elimber, needing but little training, and very easy of propagation from layers, cuttings or seed, while it a capable in this climate of adaptation to the most simple or the most intricate architectural plans, and I do not hesitate to indorse it most cordially, even though some one may say "Why, honeysuckle is so common! So it is, and so are many other beautiful trees, shruk vines and flowers in this land favored of Dame Naturn but in these simple suggestions that I shall make from week to week for the garden of our House Bauriful I shall make every effort to point out the beauty of common things, as well as to introduce the new and rare of the plant life of the world of floriculture.

PERGOLA AT J. H. KLEINE'S RESIDENCE, LAKESIDE, CAL

In California we have innumerable evergreen varieties, and I only wonder that they are not more commonly used in landscape effect here where the eye turns with satisfaction from the perpetual blue of the sky, and the brilliancy of the sunlight to the resistuiness of the green foliage on the house, or in the fence corner, or maybe trailing over a wall, or an uneven slope of ground. Perbaps in no detail of the garden should the matter of choice be more carefully exercised, however, than in the selection of vines and climbing plants.

Most vines, speaking in a very general way, need strong whost vines, speaking in a very general way, need stons nourishing soil and plenty of water. There are, however, notable exceptions. A family of great use in the dry places of the Southland are the Mesembryanthemums of a trailing habit, easily propagated from cuttings, and enduring even extreme heat. Most of the four hundred or more species of this genus have been introduced to us from the Cape of Good Hope, even those that we term natives, and which are found near the sea coast throughout Southern California, namely, Mesembryan-themum crystallinum, and Mesembryanthemum aequilaterale. Besides these very showy natives, which are much used for terraces, and sidehill slopes, there are a half dozen sorts of extreme delicacy of appearance which are most effective upon walls overhanging the sidewalk, or even as I saw one last week, festooning a broken earth wall, in a cliff garden, for a depth of not less than fifty feet. The delicate pink-and-white blosoms are starlike, and in the sunlight a dazzling show. These small flowered Mesembryanthemums are especially effective against a gray stone or cement background, effective against a gray stone or cement background, and remembering always that they are "trailers," not "climbers," they may be used to great advantage in city lots overlooking the street where dust and impracticability of proper irrigation often make a serious problem for the landscape gardener. They combine well with few other plants, however, with perhaps an exception of the cacti. Though but humble plants they have been honored in high places, the State University for years before its water problems were solved using to years before its water problems were solved using to advantage the Mesembryanthemum acquilaterale on the high terraces where now they can afford long stretches of beautiful lawns.

Vines for Buildings.

There exists in the minds of many home builders a prejudice against vines on the building itself. This is not well founded in a climate where there is so little danger of mould, or unwholesome conditions of damp-ness as in Southern California. Certainly there is no more simple or artistic and yet economical way of seen yellow flowers. The First Congregational Church of San Diego, often referred to as one of the pretilest bits of church architecture on the Coast, has as its crowning glory this Bignonia Tweedlana climbiag over the eaves and to the top of the tower in graceful fes-toons, requiring absolutely no training or prubing and

A Convenient Dwelling.

ECONOMICAL ARRANGEMENT OF A LOS ANGELES HOME.

By a Los Angeles Architect.

DWELLING which combines fairly well the features of economical arrangement of space with a pleasing exterior is that which was recently built for Adelmo Schroeder, on the northwest corner of Pico and Hoover streets, this city. It is an eight-room, two-story frame structure, with basement, having a front-age of 40 by a depth of 50 feet. In architectural style principal object sought in the construction was to se cure the maximum amount of conveniently-arranged rooming space at the smallest cost consistent with that solidity and stability without which almost any dwell-ing is "dear at any price."

On the first floor are located a parlor, 16x13 feet; a drawing-room, 14x14 feet; a dining-room, 14x16 feet; a butler's pantry, 10x14 feet; and a laundry and screen

The second floor contains four comfortably large bedrooms, a bathroom and servants' room. From conveniently-located balconies, reached from this floor, a fine view of the surrounding portions of the city and a glimpse at the distant mountains are to be had.

The interior finish of the dwelling is in cedar and white pine, in natural colors, with polished floors and decorations which, while believed to be artistic, are characterized by simplicity rather than by striking effects. In this respect, as in the exterior arrangement, ti is modern Gothic. The house faces east, and the approach from that direction is up broad steps, and across a wide projecting porch that covers the south half of the east front, and is extended, by beautifully curved lines, around a considerable portion of the south front of the building. This porch is quite a feature of the bouse, and in conjunction with the ornamental gables, the heavy, projecting cornice work and the stately col-

It was built for a little less than $5000, but the shading upon that amount that is possible in the cost of duplicating such a building is too slight for consideraion, and a very slight deviation from the details in the matter of ornamental work, or otherwise, would run the cost above the figure named. BLOOM FOR EASTER HATS.

NEVER HAVE FLOWERS BEEN USED SO LAVISH-LY AS THIS YEAR.

N EW YORK, March 30.—The first glimpse of this year's millinery openings gives the impact of this year's millinery openings gives the impression that the feminine fancy has gone flower mad, but before a circuit of the show-cases has been made the sight-seer decides that, after all, it is a most intoxicating madness.

Never before has the art of reproducing the natural blossoms reached such a standard of perfection. As an evidence of this, it may be cited that a smart shop, noted for its exquisite decorations as well as its chic millinery, had on neighboring tables plateaus of real and artificial hyacinths, and so wonderful was the repro-duction process that when the secret was whispered about, groups of women fell to wagering chocolate sodas on the real and the counterfeit, the decision being reached by fingeriag the blossoms.

A number of new flowers have invaded the milliery field this year, including wistaria, hydrangeas, hops, hawthorn, illacs, both white and purple, and dandelion puff balls. While some of these blossoms have been offered before, they were not manufactured in styles that lent themselves artistically to trimming, but the drooping "flats" of this season carry the long-stemmed flowers admirably.

One of the most striking all-flower toques shown at a recent opening was composed of delicate pink hyacinth blossoms, packed solidly on a Napoleonic shaped frame. The foundation material, chiffon, was completely hidden by the flowers, and one side was raised jauntily by a soft, sweeping bow of liberty taffeta, matching the tone of the blossoms exactly.

An effective rose flat was composed of leaves, overlapping and curied up just a trifle. On either side of the hat nestled bouquets of moss rose buds, and the same flowers, with knots of black velvet ribbon, were placed on both sides under the brim, which was faced with

In selecting a hat composed of rose leaves, the ut-most care must be taken to have the shape carry a certain air of distinction. Otherwise, the purchase will be regretted, as manufacturers of cheap millinery are duplicating this style of trimming in shapes that are

A thistle hat, which could be worn admirably with a tan-colored suit, was of ecru Milan straw in a modi-fied sallor shape. Around the crown and across the top, from side to side through the center, was fluted velvet ribbon in a beautiful shade of sage green, while on one side, and drooping a trifle toward the edge of the brim, was a mass of thistle bloom, in that clusive mauve shade which can only be described as misty.

For early spring wear with the royal blue tailored suits and foulards of the same shade, comes a stunning picture hat of burnt satin straw, trimmed with bows of liberty taffeta in royal blue and royal blue popples. Such flowers never grew on living tree, shrub or plant, but as a head ornament for modern woman, they are picturesquely effective.

An ideal hat for a garden party was of white satin straw, with Irish point lace inset on the brim, as well as in the center of the crown. The shape was a perfect shepherdess, and had for its only ornament a shower of haby popples in exquisite shades of pink and red.

Another striking shepherdess hat was also inset with the lace and encircled by lilace, and a drooping flat of talle was covered with a network of fine silver cord, caught at each intersection with forget-me-nots. Forget-me-nots were never more in vogue than this season They form whole toques, being massed on brim and crown, with bows in self-tone of black velvet, fitting tight to the hair in the back.

The Alsatian and butterfly bows at the back of the hat have practically disappeared, and in their stead is used an effect of long, very flat loops, with two or three cads, which fit over the hair, but do not extend below the nape of the neck.

A picture hat sultable for garden parties or carriage was of pure white satin straw in intricate weave, encircled with a band of magenta velvet and trimmed with a mass of magenta hop blossoms, with long, slender stems. Stems falling loose, or woven and braided, form a striking factor of flower trimming.

Among the many red hats shown was an artistic color scheme in crimson and soft sage green. The founda-tion of the flat shape was a peculiar crimson straw, one strand of which had a velvety finish. The only trimstrand of which had a velvely noise. The only trim-ming on the top of the hat was a mass of red currants with follage of misty sage green. The brim, faced with shirred black Maline, was raised on the left side with a knot of soft ribbon, matching exactly the velvet strand

Large toques of crushed tea roses are striking, but rather trying to the average complexion. The yellow-ish pink of these flowers is not so pleasing, although somewhat smarier than the more humble coloring of

A pretty hat of fine white straw has a flat crown and The face of the King Himself-His face whose servants a sweeping brim, heavily rolled on one side. Midway the between the edge of the brim and the crown is an insertion of point de Venise. The hat is edged with crushed blush roses, and a wreath of the same flower muggles around the crown. At the back, the hat fits n close to the hair, and is finished with a bow of pink title.

The fad of the hour in trimming large flat hats is a two-inch band running crosswise just back of the hat's center and fitting down very tight. Sometimes this is of velvet or ribbon, ending on either side in a rosette or a flat bunch of flowers. Again, it is made of tiny flowers sewed close together. The floral bands can be purchased by the yard and are exceedingly useful to the home milliner. They come in very small rose buds, forget-menots, English daisies, geraniums, and the smaller fruits, like currants and gooseberries. These two fruits, together with a few cherries, are noticed in the smarter millinery, but grapes are being retired slowly but

A flat white hat at a recent opening attracted much notice, because of its eccentric trimming at the back. The material was a fine white chip weave in ivory white, faced with white tulle. The crown was round and low and the brim drooped shepherdess fashion. Across the center from one edge of the brim to the other, thus dividing the hat in two, ran a flat band of black velvet overlaid with white medallions. From under this, falling to the back, was a shower of tiny green rose buds. showing the tints that come just before the petals begin to uncurl. A few leaves were combined with the buds. The effect was of a miniature waterfall of buds, covering the hair completely.

Another feature of the small spring hat is the height to which it is raised in the front. Bandeau, matching the under-trimming of the brim, raises it as effectually as a well-dressed pompadour, and the brim from bandeau to edge forms almost a quarter circle. The frame then runs well down in the back. A stylish finish is a ro-sette of velvet on either side, close to the hair, with flat, pointed ends, which also fit close to the head.

In ready-to-wear hats, the competition for popularity lies between the ivory white with black and the burnt straw with black. The dead white gives a more dressy finish and lends itself to more elegant trimmings than does the burnt straw, but the latter will be extremely popular for wear with pongee shirt-walst suits.

A striking toque shows alternate folds of black and white straw and a high brim finished with woven black and white straw in diamond shape. Six of these diamond-shaped pieces are used, each growing smaller toward the back, which is finished with loops of the black and white straw. The toque is raised on one side with a straw band, to show a pure white wing nestling close to the bair. close to the hair.

From a Bond street shop comes a golden burnt straw that is distinctly trim and English in its lines. The that is distinctly trim and English in its lines. The shape is a round sailor, with a roll so slight that it is not trying to any face. The trimming is simple but effective—three rows of narrow black velvet ribbon around the crown, and three-black pompons.

Another English toque of burnt straw is built on toreador lines. The brim is overlaid with three rows of fine black straw in a fancy weave, and at the back is a breed bow of soft silk fastened with a long, narrow jet.

broad bow of soft silk, fastened with a long, narrow jet

A burnt straw with a brim that rolls on both sides, a trifle higher on the left than the right side, is trimmed across the top with three bands of black silk. Bows of the silk are used under the rolling brim on either side, with black wings under the left side.

Still another round English toque of burnt stra edged on either side of the brim with black straw, and the two colors form a buckle-shaped piece in the front. A pair of black quills is run through the crown. The straw is pliable, and the effect of the brim is of folds.

The imported hats show odd combinations of fancy straw and tulle in alternate folds, but the combination appears less popular with American buyers than that of

If feathers are used, they fall backward over the hair, starting near the middle of the hat. The end of the quill is rarely covered with ribbons or ornaments. The feather fad is to have the rough end stuck through the brim or the crown. If cabochons or buckles are used, they must not hide the end.

For early spring wear, the royal blue feather bids fair to be the most popular. A feather shading from white to royal blue is also shown.

There never was a greater variety of shapes than this year, and, by selecting up-to-date trimming, almost any shape used last year can be converted into a confection for Easter, 1903. The distinguishing feature will be the lace, the flowers, or the band stretched across the crown from brim to brim. The shape is less important.

Unless two or three irons were kept simultaneously heating a living could not possibly be made. The toil is constant, and the exhaustion after a prolonged day's labor extreme. Formerly the women worked far into the night, and the sound of the hammer scarcely ever ceased. But more than twelve hours a day is now illegal, though in busy times it is said the law is sometimes evaded.

Disastrous Households.

The great majority of the women have households to attend to, and a delicate inquiry as to the home-work elicited the response from one of them, "Oh, that has to go undone until we have time. We do that at dinner-time and after tea." Most of the women leave the shops about noon to prepare the mid-day meal for their husbands, returning to the chain-shop immediately it is over. Ability at the anvil is a valuable asset to a marriageable maiden.

The younger women are for the most part cheerful at their work, and the merry chorus will combine with the ring of the hammer. At the same time it is not surprising to hear that infantile mortality is prevalent, the whole district having rather a poor reputation in this respect, and as home comforts and sanitation are both at a discount, houses being taken not on their merits, but because they have attached the money-earning smithy, the social life leaves a good deal to be de-

BEAUTY DON'TS FOR FEET.

Don't wear tight, stiff or ill-fitting shoes or boots. They are the common cause of corns, causing pressure or friction on the projections of the bones.

Don't wear rubber overshoes in the house. Remove them at once. They interfere with the proper ventilation of the feet, as they are air tight. If worn too much, they cause tender feet, dizzness and headache.

GOOD FIELD FOR WOMEN.

OPENING FOR PROFITABLE EMPLOYMENT IN THE ADVERTISING FIELD.

By a Special Contributor.

Since woman's introduction into the business world is no longer an experiment, but a permanent factor, occupations affording opportunities to demonstrate her ability are steadily increasing. The advertising field is one that offers unusual inducements to the ambitious woman with ideas and energy. That she is today playing an important part in the development of this may readily be seen by the satisfactory results of those who have drifted into the profession. Woman's natural endowments—tact, ingenuity and delicate perceptions—especially adapt her for the study and practice of the art of advertising. The work is such that it keeps ame time there are exceptions, and Mrs. Edular turned out—a term, as she explains, unhabit turned out—a term, in the office of a professional. She would, undoubtedly, receive equally good training, and so be thoroughly simply appalling. For small chair rather over the money in the office of a professional. lines, doubtless, having previously been wise enough to secure a few clients for a beginning, thus feeling sure of an income for immediate expenses.

There are several kinds of advertising open to woman. Many of the large manufacturers employ specialists to write their booklets and catalogues for the display of goods, which serve as a convenience to their customers in buying. This is one of the most interesting branches of the business, and one in which woman may achieve a high degree of success; particularly in the description of wearing apparel, house furnishings and food products. She is quick to see the points of advantage in things of interest to women, and is, therefore, able to present their merits with a convincingness that brings results. She can sing the praises of a cerval, or canned fruits, meats and vegetables so alluringly that everybody whose eyes rest on the advertising matter will become ravenously hungry. She knows instinctively which points will most appeal to the prospective purchaser, and in possessing this knowledge will use it wisely.

The quality of her work will surely tell, and by the eareful study of individual needs and aiming to accomplish something enough different to attract more than rdinary attention, she will find her list of clients grad-

HIS LAST CHANCE,

The keeper in attendance on a guest at a Norfolk shooting party recently looked on with disgust at the gentleman's erratic marksmanship. He was banging way, here and there and everywhere, but no birds feil. "Aim 'igher, sir," advised the keeper.

Still the birds flew untouched.

"It ain't the gun, sir, and it ain't the cartridges." remarked the Norfolk man. "Try shuttin your right eye instead of the left, sir." But not pheasant fell.

The keeper scratched his head.

"The birds is very strong on the wind this year," he remarked, "but there's one more chance. If I was you, sir. I should 'ave a pop with both eyes shut."—[London Answers.

VI-STORY OF MISS LIZA AND THE KING WHO MADE SHOES.

THERE was a pause, and then Wally Wanderoon asked the children about what they thought of the story. They were not as enthusiastic about it as the droll little man could desire. Drusilla was especially cool, and she was the only one who replied to the question. "It's a tale," she said, with something like a sneer.

"Huh!" exclaimed Drusilla, "you sholy don't speck me ter tell no good story in dish yer place whar de hills runs bofe backerds an' forreds, an' whar you hatter crawl sideways fer ter keep fum fallin' down hill whichever way you turn."

Drusilla's desire was to tell no story at all, but she finally told one which for many years had been popular with negro girls between the age of 12 and 20.

"I tell you all right now," said Drusilla, "I dunner nothin' 'tall 'bout dis tale but de tellin' un it. The little Biddy Hen felt very, very small, and a wee bit afraid of the big birds, which could have crushed her with one stamp of a foot, but the eyes in the small heads at the end of the long necks looked kind, and so the little Biddy Hen told her story, although she was so nervous that she nearly shook her topknot off.

"Feathers?" said the biggest ostrich, "Feathers? How unfortunate. We were plucked yesterday, and there isn't a feather in the crowd."
"Oh, dear," wailed the little Biddy Hen, and she sat right down in the sand, while all the big birds gathered around her, sympathetically.

All at once a beautiful young ostrich whispered s thing to the biggest ostrich.

"Yes." sald the biggest ostrich, "an Easter egg."

"You are very kind," faltered the Biddy Hen. But in heart she wondered what on earth she should do with an egg, and an ostrich egg at that,

But the ostriches whispered together, and every time ne told another there was a loud, harsh laugh. the poor little Biddy Hen couldn't see the joke, until the biggest ostrich put his head way down close to her ear and whispered something.

"Oh, my goodness me," chuckled laughed until she nearly fell over. chuckled the Biddy Hen, and "I ought to go at once," said the Biddy Hen. She looked anxiously at the darkening sky.

"Wait until morning," said the Tame Ostrich, "and I will carry you on my back with the egg."

So that night the tired Biddy Hen roosted far from cried Bess, and she went to play with her dolls in a very unhappy frame of mind.

"All that afternoon the chickens on the farm where Bessie lived watched and watched for some sign of the Biddy Hen I'm afraid something has happened to her," said the yellow hen to Mrs. Cochin China.

"Poor little thing," said that grave lady. "We should have kept her at home."

"It's the Game Cock giving the signal," cried the yellow hen, and down they rushed to the road.

Such a long journey as the little Biddy Hen had made. Seated high on the back of the Tame Ostrich, she had kept the big egg in place between his wings. He took great strides, but his back was broad, and as she had nothing else to do, and it was quite time, she laid her own little egg beside the great ostrich egg. Hid behind a great bank of sand, the Tame Ostrich stopped, and the Biddy Hen hopped off.

"Did you get your feather?" called out the yellow hen.

"No," said the Biddy Hen, "but I got an egg."

"An egg?" said all the chickens, very much puzzled. Then the Biddy Hen told them something, and they all cackled with laughter

Tame Cstrich said as he left.

But the Biddy Hen was troubled about one thing.

"How will Bess know it is for her?" she said.

"Ask-the Green Parrot," said the Game Cock, kindly,
The Green Parrot was Dick's pet. He could speak some words very plainly, and he liked the good little Biddy Hen, because once or twice she had brought him a bit of bread or fruit.

"That's easy," said the Green Parrot loftily, when the Biddy Hen consulted him. "I'll just sit on top of the "I'll just sit on top of the egg and say 'A feather for Bess.' "

"How nice it is that you can speak English," said the

Biddy Hen admiringly. "I wish I could talk to Beas

On Easter Monday morning the children always unted for their eggs on the lawn, so the Tame Ostrich came over very early, and followed by the excited chick-ens, he rolled the egg behind a rose bush.

When Bessie and Dick and their father and mother came out there was no one in sight but the Biddy Hen, calmip picking bugs off the rose bush.

'Oh, my dear, dear Biddy Hen," cried Bess, and ran to her, but the sly Biddy Hen scuttled straight around the rose bush, with Bess after her.

"Oh, father, mother, Dick-quick."

"What's the matter, my dear child?"

"Bessie, darling!"

"What's up, Bettykins?"
With these exclamations, the father and mother and Dick rushed to the little girl.

But when they saw the big egg they were silent with astonishment. How did that monstrous thing get behind the rose bush?

Just then the Green Parrot came waddling across the lawn. He mounted the egg, and said in his funny croak-

'A feather for Bess! A feather for Bess!

The four people looked at each other. "Now, how did he learn that?

"A feather for Bess!" repeated the parrot and jumped

"You got it wrong that time, old man," laughed Dick.
"It's an egg for Bess, I think."

Just then there was a funny cracking sound, and a long line showed on the outside of the egg.
"My dear, it's a young ostrich," shouted the missionary, and sure enough, a funny head appeared, and then began a fluttering and rolling, and a strange little bird sprawled out on the lawn half in and half out of the

The Green Parrot had not expected this. He nearly crazy between astonishment and joy, and he pranced around the funny object, crying, "A feather for Bess!" a feather for Bess!" until the man and his wife and Dick and Bess sat down on the grass and laughed.

"You can have all the feathers you want when this youngster grows up," said Bess's father, as he picked ip the blinking haby. Then the chickens strolled up and tried to look unconscious, but the roosters crowed in spite of themselves, and the hers clucked, and the chickens peeped until it was the noisest place imaginable

"But how did the egg get there?" asked Bess's father in great perplexity.

Perhaps an ostrich laid it," suggested Dick. "Perhaps one of the neighbors sent it," said his wife.

ARABIAN NIGHTS POSTMEN.

Complaints of delay or mistakes in the delivery of etters are occasionally heard from the indignant Briton. Whether the Bagdad ratepayer ever makes similar out-cry about the eccentricities of Bagdad's St. Martin's-le-Grand is uncertain.

There are two postal systems in Bagdad—the Turkish and the British. Practically all the letters going West go by the Turkish system. By this there are two routes, one by camels to Damascus, and thence to Beirut, whence the mails are transported by steamer to Brindisi, and afterward by rail; the other by camels

GATLING'S IDEA OF WAR.

War is an anachronism-a relic of the Stone Age, when prehistoric man, adopting the only mode of argument known to him, fought for the possession of caves. When it is made too horrible to contemplate, it will cease to be the resort of civilized nations." Dr. Richard Gatling, who died February 26 in New York, wrote that opinion to a friend many years ago. Dr. Galling was the inventor of the famous Gatling rapid-fire gun, the first "pepper-box" designed for wholesale slaughter of troops. He was once a clerk in a St. Louis store. With nessing the sufferings of wounded soldiers coming from the front during the Civil War led him to wonder if a remedy could not be found for the great world evil.
When he took up the construction of his machine gun in 1864, his life was threatened by people who considered him a "public menace" and a wholesale murderer. Gen. Butler used two of the first Gatling guns in the famous James River expedition. Abroad, the invention was taken up at once, and many similar mechanisms sprang from his idea .- [Collier's Weekly.

PRACTICAL HYGIENE.

By a Staff Writer.

The Fasting Cure.

ANY more people are made sick and die from over-Man more people are all and the eating than from over-drinking, not because over-eating is more damaging than over-drinking, but because there are vastly more people who regularly eat too much than there are who drink too much. In fact, it is not over-reaching the truth to say that at least 90 per cent. of the adults in civilized countries cat more than they should, and would be much better off physically and mentally-perhaps even morally-if they would cut down the amount of food consumed, either by omitting one meal or by reducing the quan-tity eaten at the three regular meals.

Perhaps it is a recognition of this truth that has so increased the popularity of the fasting cure of late. The chief apostle of this system is Dr. Edward Hooker Dewey of Meadville, Pa, who was a surgeon in the army during the Civil War. Those who are interested in this subject would do well to send for a copy of Dr. 's book, "The No Breakfast Plan and the Fasting published by the author, at Meadville. In this book he gives some interesting particulars of cases that have come under his attention, and sometimes under his care, persons who have fasted for periods ranging from 36 to 60 days, with portraits of several of them, men and women on the None of them show any appearance of emaciation in the face, but look bright, cheerful and in good condi-

Mr. Dewey's system has been bitterly opposed by physicians, many of whom have expressed disbellef in the reliability of these tests, insinuating that food has been administered in some shape. However, Dr. Dewey furnishes sufficient proof of the truth of his statements to satisfy any reasonable person. In his preface the author says:

in the professional care of the sick. It begins in inexperience and in a haze of medical superstition, and ends with a faith that nature is the all in all for the cure of disease. The hygiene unfolded is both original and revolutionary; its practicability is of the largest, and its physiology beyond any possible question. The reader is assured in advance that every line of this volume has been written with conviction at white heat, that enforced food in sickness and the drug that corrodes are professional barbarisms unworthy of the times in which we

Dr. Dewey explains the possibility of making these long fasts without injury, but rather with benefit, incese of many diseases, by quoting from Yoe's Physiology the following table of the estimated losses that occur in death, after starvation:

Muscle
Liver	 16
Spleen	 63
Blood	 17
Nerve-centers	 .00

Thus it is seen that there exists in human bodies a vast reserve of predigested food, with the brain in possession of power so to absorb as to maintain structural integrity in the absence of food or power to digest which goes into its cave or hollow tree fat at the opening of winter and comes out thin but healthy-and hungry-in the spring.

Dr. Dewey specially recommends the fast as a cure for alcoholism and asthma. Extracts from his book on these subjects will be given in future numbers.

The Times has no hesitation in urging a serious ex-amination and consideration of this fasting and non-breakfast plan to all who are sick. It is not to be ex-pected that the medical profession should display any vast amount of enthusiasm over such a system as this, which utterly ignores drugs of all kinds, but then the interests of the people at large are greater than those of the members of any particular profession. It is also true that patients have occasionally died at the end of a long fast, but it may respectfully be submitted that patients do also, once in a while, die while under the care of the doctors. Then, it should be remembered that a great majority of those who adopt this system only do so after having tried almost every other methof cure, and many of them after they have been told by the physicians that their case is hopeless.

By the way, why would it not be a good idea to establish resorts where the fasting cure may be put into prac-tice, in connection with sun baths, steam baths, mas-sage and other hygienic measures? The expense of running such an establishment should not be great. It would be an advantage for people who want to fast to be in some quiet place, where they would not be constantly tempted by the smell of cooking and the sight

THOSE engaged in business in Los Angeles are for-turnate in having a wide variety of residence sites to choose from. Within the city limits there is the sandy plain, elevated mesa and hills several hundred feet in height, while between Pasadena and the ocean there is a still greater variety of location, from elevated n tain foothills, with their dry atmosphere, to the moist, to keep your sitting-room comfortably warm, at absolute the sea coast.

65 to 68 deg. F. Do not heat your room with an

From a hygienic standpoint, there is something to be said for and against all these locations. The choice depends largely upon circumstances—on the make-up and business occupation of the individual. It is a good thing to live some distance away from the business center, where the air is pure, and rest at night undisturbed by street noises. On the other hand, if a man has to be at his office or store room early and late, is is somewhat of a tax to ride a long distance mornings and ev-enings, especially in view of the generally overcrowded condition of the street cars. Again, the air in the suburbs is not always so pure as it might be, owing to the fact that cesspools sometimes take the place of sew-

Again, the hills have many charms, with their extensive views and daily breeze from the ocean, but most of the hills of Los Angeles are covered with adobe soil, which is damp and sticky in winter and compares unfavorably with the sandy loam of South Los Angeles or the gravel of Boyle Heights. For those who go farther afield, the choice between the foothills of the Si-erra Madre and the sea coast must depend upon their health—upon what ailment they suffer from. If they are in good health, either location may be chosen. Those who suffer from lung complaints should avoid the sea coast and live in the higher foothills, while people who suffer from nervousness and insomnia will find relief at the sea coast.

E UCALYPTUS oil is growing in popularity as a basis for many remedies. For instance, in The Times Dr. Heron of Los Angeles, who manufactures eucalyptus oll, advertises a salve, a hair restorer, a skin food, cough drops, a linament, soap, a tooth powder and other rem-

Two linemen were recently electrocuted while at work in Los Angeles. A local paper says:
"The two men lay on the sidewalk with a cloth over their faces from the time they were killed until the cor-oner's wagon arrived, almost an hour-later, and by that time all hope or possibility of reviving them was gone. Had a doctor or any one who knew that such cases are not necessarily fatal been on the spot and applied long-continued methods of practice to the two men, they might have been saved."

This looks like a case of criminal negligence on the part of somebody. People apparently dead have been resuscitated after quite a long time of unconsciousness, and a person should never be given up for dead so easily as appears to have been done in this case. Men who have been under water for quite a long time have been restored to life by persistently pulling out the tongue for a considerable time, and a Frenchman has invented a machine to perform the operation. Again, the Scientific American some years ago stated that peo who are apparently dead have been restored to life dilation of the anus.

In cases of apparent death from electric shock special caution should be used. Some physicians have ex-pressed the opinion that every criminal who has been electrocuted has been buried alive, unless his body is dissected. This may be going too far; still, the general public is inclined to take things altogether too much for granted in cases of apparent death, when sometimes, by a little patient work, a life might have been saved.

FOLLOWING is some good advice to persons suffering from tuberculosis, and to those who may com-contact with them. It is written by Dr. William H Dukeman of Los Angeles and published in the Medical News of August 4, 1902. Dr. Dukeman has had it republished in circular form. The closing paragraph is appecially commendable, and shows that Dr. Dukeman is another of those physicians who are giving increased attention to hygiene and less to drug medication:

- (2.) A patient who tries to get well has ten times as many chances of getting well as the one who is and indifferent

Manufactured Nut Foods

A SAN DIEGO correspondent inquires in regard to anut butter, which has come into general use among vegetarians and others of late. He asks whether it is a wholesome food or merely a condiment, to be used in very small quantities, also in regard to its keeping SAN DIEGO correspondent inquires in regard to qualities.

The nut foods placed on the market by the various food-companies are all, so far as The Times is aware, manufactured from peanuts, other nuts being too expensive for the purpose. Now, the peanut is not a nut at all, but a tuber, belonging to the same family as the sweet potato. Moreover, it is difficult of digestion, except to robust stomachs, and there is an aftertaste which is objectionable to many, for which reason some of the nut foods are flavored with coffee or something of that kind. Most people find the peanut more thing of that kind. Most people find the peanut more appetizing when well reasted and eaten warm from the shell. The nut butter is a food, not a condiment, and may be eaten in considerable quantity by those who are able to digest it. Another drawback of the peanut is that it contains a considerably larger proportion of starch than the true nuts. starch than the true nuts.

For those who wish to use nuts as an important article of food, it would be better to take such nuts as the walnut and almond, removing the inner skin, and using them, thoroughly masticated, in conjunction with fruit, fresh and dried.

The Time Test.

Time is the measure of all things. Good dentistry stands or falls by it. Time discards about 90 per cent of the methods used in dentistry. The discavery of today is the back number of tomorrow. Time discards about 99 per cent. of the methods used in filling a tooth While it is easy to fill a tooth today it is hard to say what will safisfy tomorrow. This is why men and dentists attach so great a value to the tests of time.

The Covington system of scientific dentistry has stood the tests of time for ten years. The Coving-stood the tests of time for ten years. stood the tests of time for ten years. The Coving-ton methods effiling and the materials used in this office, have been measured by the highest stand-ards for more than ten years. Our best advertisers are these patients who have had our work long enough to apply the time tests. We have the names of hundreds of such patients on our books and will be glad to refer you to them at any time. The Coving-

Prophylactic Dentistry.

Some one has well said that "Necessity is the mother of invention." There was a necessity for my system of Prophylactic Dentistry, or I should not have been obliged to invent it. There was a demand for something newer, more satisfying, more far reaching in results than any American dentist had yet obtained. My system of prophylactic treatment is filling this demand. It is a saving dentistry, not a tooth destroyer. It is a system of dentistry that takes into account the whole tem of dentistry, not a tooth eastroyer. It is a sys-tem of dentistry that takes into account the whole human system. It does not depend on anesthetics to relieve gain. The very nature and foundation of prophylactic treatment is healing and pain-reliev-ing. It produces a condition of absolute health in the mouth. This condition extends to the stemach and the digestive organs, through the medium of and the digestive organs, through the medium of the mouth secretions, which means that prophy-lactic treatment begins by building up the health, and ends by putting the stomach and the digestive organs in the finest possible condition. Prophy-lactic treatment heals soft and spongy gums, pre-vents chalky enamel; and in cases where filling is to be done or extraction to be made, a course of prophylactic treatment will reduce pain and make to be done or extraction to be made, a course of prophylactic treatment will reduce pain and make the operation easy for the most nervous patient to stand. No other dentist practices this system of treatment. It is purely my own invention, and parally my own in operation. I charge no more where prophylactic treatment is used in conjunction with filling, bridging, crowning or extracting, than other dentists charge without it.

Discolored Teeth.

Nature is to blame for some discolored teeth, dentists are to be blamed for others, but by far the larger pertion of discolored teeth are caused by neglect, pure and simple. In many instances where teeth are discolored, it is the fault of some careless operation by an inexperienced dentist. Inferior materials are used in filling teeth, oxidizing and crowding into the substance of the toeth leaving the tooth dark in color. Before you have filling done be sure that your dentist understands materials and their action and that he uses in your teeth those materials which have stood the tests of time. It often happens where large cavities exist or the decay is of long standing and that there is more or less inflammation set up, which in the meantime if caj is of long standing and that there is more or less inflammation set up, which in the meantime if not removed will cause the decay of the tooth and a discoloration which its sunally hard for the most experienced and earnest dentists to remove. This discoloration can be easily avoided by having your teeth attended to in time. No matter whether you come te me or not I would certainly advise proper attention to aby decay of this sort if you value nice white teeth. nice white teeth

Artificial Teeth.

Artificial teeth which have the beauty of natural teeth are not plentiful. No matter what price you pay me for a plate I try to make the teeth as natural and as harmonious with your general facial expression as possible. I charge nothing extra for the time, thought and study which I put on this branch of plate making. Again a plate may be neat in appearance and be uncomfortable. This thing I always avoid. In making artificial teeth I ask no patient known to me to pay a cent until the teeth are done, worn and declared to be satisfactory. If you are using bridges that do not feel comfartable, that do not give you full satisfaction call on me and let me advise you hew the evii may best be corrected.

A Word Personal.

I promise nothing I cannot execute. My charges are as reasonable as any dentist can do good, honest work. No charge for examination, censultation, or estimates en work.

He explained that he had seen a man slipping through the bushes some distance away, and had called on him to halt. He failed to obey the command, and the guard blazed away at him, more to frighten him into a stop than anything else. Of course, the fellow never halted. He was probably too badly frightened to stop at that time. While we were talking to the guard we heard a fearful noise at least half a mile from the guard's station, and we made a break for the place to see what the matter was. We heard several people screaming as if in great agony. Bown the road we went at full speed, and in a short while we came upon a little cabin which stood on the roadside. The noise was in this cabin, and I never heard such grouning and wailing in my life. We found three men in the house. They were in great agony, and we asked them what was the matter. We have been shot, they said, and sure enough they had been shot. One was shot in the right arm, another in the back, and the third in the hip. They had all been wounded by the same bullet. The Lord Goat Sahib.

THE threatened execution (happily not carried out) of the regimental pet of the First Battalion Royal Welsh Fusiliers recalls an amusing incident that occurred in connection with the death of one of its predecessors. When the battalion was stationed at Dum. Dum. Bengal, in 1883, the goat (a present to the regi-Dum, Bengal, in 1883, the goat (a present to the regiment from Her Majesty Queen Victoria) suffered much from the somewhat pestilential climate of the Indian station. Its illness was, of course, a matter of deep concern to the regiment, the natives fully sympathizing in their anxiety, for they were convinced that the goat was held by them to be more than mortal and possessed of some of the sacred attributes with which the Hindus invest their sacred cow. Returning one afternoon from Calcutta, the chaplain was greeted by his native servant with a lugubrious face. 'Master, your things are all prepared for service this evening; the funeral will be at 6 o'clock." "Who is dead?" asked the astonished chaplain. "Sir, the lord goat sahib is dead!"—[London Daily Mail.

N THE several articles which the Commercial has published during the past few weeks regarding the history of the Second Regiment of Maine Volunteers and its record of heroism in the war for the Union, one incident has not been mentioned which deserves to be spoken of now that its veterans are with us to revive old recollections and live over again the days of the past. It relates to the gallant Gen. Jameson, the first colonel of the regiment. colonel of the regiment.

The fortunes of war called him early into the heart of the strife. When his regiment had been driven back from the batteries of the enemy at the first battle of Bull Run, leaving its wounded behind, Col. Jameson called for volunteers, and, leading back a little band under a steady fire, the men brought off in their arms the injured and helpless. It was for gallantry in this engagement that he won his brigadier's star. Later he commanded splendid regiments from New York and Pennsylvania in the battles of Yorktown, Williamburg and Fair Oaks. Gen. Jameson became so worn out with heavy marches, the fatigue of camp life, the exposure later the doorbell rang and an irate man with a red and hardship of battle, and the personal exertion of caring for the health and comfort of his men that his own health gave way, and in September, 1862, he came force. to his home on leave of absence to recuperate. But he gradually became worse, and died on November 6 of that year at the early age of 35.

It was but a few days before his death that the incident occurred to which we allude. A telegraph message was received in this city from President Abraham Lincoln, addressed to Gen. Jameson. It was as nearly as can be recalled in these words: "Let me know the exact condition of your health, as I want to know how you are. I hope you will soon be better and be able to return." This message was delivered in person to Gen. Jameson at his home in Upper Stillwater by our esteemed townsman, Charles E. Bliss, who was then in charge of the American telegraph office in this city. to a celluloid ball with a little bell inside! His amu

President Lincoln at that time was carrying upon his heart a nation's trials. He was weighted with sorrow and responsibility as few men have ever been burdened with the cares of statecraft in a time of raging civil war.—Yet he could stop amid it all to send a message hundreds of miles to inquire for the health of a gallant man whom he knew to be sick where near Bangor, in Maine .- [Bangor, Me., Com-

Gen. Chaffee and the Loot.

GEN. ADNA R. CHAFFEE has tried to forget one inclident of his career in the China campaign, but a recent caller at Governor's Island could not resist reminding him of it, and the veteran of four wars fidgeted at the recollection.

During the campaign of Peking, Gen. Chaffee was one day visited by the late Li Hung Chang, who descended on the American headquarters in gorgeous state for a ceremonial call.

It will be remembered that Gen. Chaffee was sternly opposed to looting, and issued the most peremptory or-ders and inflicted the severest punishment for their

His reception rooms at headquarters were impressively furnished with magnificent carved tables, chairs and chests borrowed from the palace of a Chinese prince who had fled with the court. Gen. Chaffee had an inventory of the stuff, and it was all returned before he left Peking.

But the roving eye of Li Hung Chang twinkled behind his big rimmed spectacles, and there was mischief in the glance. In the midst of general and harmless con-versation, he suddenly turned to the American general,

"Where did you get your furniture?"

There was a moment of silence, and the smiles of the staff officers were almost audible. The stern-faced general coughed, shifted his feet, and said:
"Hm—m, it came from the palace of Prince Yi, Your Excellency.

"What did you pay for it?" was the next query.
Wholly guiltless of loot, Gen. Chaffee felt as if he had been caught in the act. He replied, with a slight hitch:
"Well, I really didn't pay anything for it."

From the lips of the interpreter, at Li Hung Chang's whisper, came the dreaded bombshell, one word: "Loot?

The staff officers, who knew how their commander felt on this subject, considered that moment worth a month's pay. Gen. Chaffee blushed; there was no doubt of it. He saw he was held for a crime of which he was innocent. He said:

"Oh, no, no, indeed. Borrowed. It will be all a back, I assure you. It would have been stolen if we had not cared for it in this way?"

The "terrible old man" of China chuckled, and his chuckle was a study in expression. The conversation was shifted, and no more was said about the furniture. But Gen. Chaffee was plainly ill at ease throughout the rest of the interview.—[Mail and Express.

For a week this order of things continued. Every day Cricket went for a walk, regularly disappeared for a few minutes and always came back with a brand-new ball in his teeth. Evidently he had found where they grew and his source of supply caused comment in the Whitaker Wright's Advice.

W HITAKER WRIGHT, the storm-tossed financier, W lived in Philadelphia before he went to London, and advocated in Philadelphia, though not with any notable success, the same startling and bizarre business methods that later on, in England, gave such questionable prominence to him.

In floating a Philadelphia company once, Mr. Wright had some difficulty in persuading a staid board of direc-tors to adopt his suggestions. He talked to them two hours, and in conclusion he said:

"Gentlemen, you remind me a little of a Bucks county farmer my father used to know. This farmer took every Saturday a bag of grain to the mill to be ground. In one end of the bag he put the grain; in the other end he put a big stone that about equaled it in weight, and then he threw the bag, balanced in this way, over his horse's back, and, getting up behind, he rode off.
"This farmer educated his son to take the bag to the mill in his place. He showed the boy how to balance it by putting the grain in one end and a rock in the other. But the boy was shrewd, enterprising, and inventive. On a certain morning, somehow, he happened to get half the grain at one end, and the other half at the other, and, behold, the bag balanced of itself now, and there was no need of any stone. He threw it over the horse with a pleased air, and called his father out to "'Look, father,' he said. 'Look what I have done. I have found a way to balance the sack, a way to carry the grain to the mill without carrying at the same time an equal weight of stone.

"'Boy,' said the old man, 'take down that sack at Shake all the grain back to one end, and put a rock in the other end immediately. That is how your grandfather carried grain to mill in his day, and it is how I carried it in mine. You have a dangerous bent

A Feast Day in Morocco.

F. FERGUSON, superintendent of Union Mission at Eighteenth and McGee streets, received a letter yesterday from Fred Weiss, a missionary stationed at Tangier, Morocco, North Africa. The letter is dated February 20, and was seventeen days on the road from North Africa to Kansas City. In his letter Mr. Weiss

Very few people in the United States know anything of the condition of this country and of the work that is being done by the World's Faith Missionary Association. Morocco is known as one of the darkest spots and as one of the hardest fields in all Africa.

"A few months ago a missionary by the name of Cooper was killed in the market place of Fez. At the time he was killed he was in the market place buying tome maiting to be used in the missionary home. While he was making his purchase a fanatical Moor rushed out from the mosque, drew a revolver from beneath his coat and shot Mr. Cooper in the abdomen. He was car-ried to the mission house, and died two hours later. He left a wife and two little children here in Africa.

"We are in a land where men's hearts are cruel be-yond description. They have become even lower than the beasts of the field. During some of their feast days as many as 8000 people gather together in Tangier. Many of the mountain tribes are represented, each man and boy carrying a gun and a large knife.

"In the morning, at a given signal, men with tomtoms and bugles march into the market place, followed by a great crowd of men carrying banners of many colors. With one accord hundreds of people begin dancing and jumping up and down, trying to keep step to the music of the drums and bugles. Faster and faster becomes the music, the dancers trying their utmost to keep time with the drums.

Suddenly a man rushes out with an armful of hatchets, which are distributed among the men. Each man and boy in the dance takes a hatchet and continues to dance and jump until they work themselves into a perfect frenzy. Holding a hatchet in both hands, the dancer will bring it down on his clean-shaven head with great force. We stand by and look with horror on the awful sight. On they go, one after another, cutting and striking at their heads until the blood flows in streams down their heads and over their bodies, saturating what little clothing they have on. saturating what little clothing they have on "The most horrible and revolting part of the cere-mony is yet-to follow. While this savage rite is pro-ceeding loaves of bread are brought into the ring. The bread is broken into pieces, used to soak up the blood, and is afterward caten by the people. We turn away unable to look any longer upon such revolting scenes.

"These are perilous times in this land. There is war in the interior, and the country is greatly disturbed. If the fanatical portion of the people had their way every missionary would be blotted out. We thank God for a ruler who favors our being here."—[Kansas City

The Sacred Bridge at Nikko.

A FTER the Campanile of Venice, the Sacred Bridge of Nikko! A typhoon that occurred in the latter part of last year in Japan caused much damage to property, but no damage that, in the eyes of a true Japanese, can be compared to the loss of this ancient refic. It was known as the Red Bridge, or Mi-hashi, being made of wood coated all over with red lacquer, and was formerly so sacred that it was closed to all person; ex-cept the Shogun, save twice a year when it was opened to pilgrims. It was built at the spot where the Bud-dhist saint, Shodo Shomin, a hermit who lived at Kikko in the eighth century, crossed the Daiya-gawa on a bridge consisting of two green and blue snakes thrown there by the divinity who had once helped the Chinese pilgrim, Hsuan Chuang, across the River of Flowing

It was supported-the Mi-hashi that is; not St. Sho nin's snake-bridge—on stone piers of great solidity fixed into the rocks between which the stream flows, and its color formed a beautiful and striking contrast to the deep-green background of cryptomeria. It was 84 feet long and 18 feet wide; was built in 1638, and last repaired in 1892: At each end were gates that were always kept closed, and a Russian Prince who visited Nikko some time ago wounded the feelings of the people very much by rudely insisting on traversing it. Like the Campanile at Venice, it showed decay some time ago—so at least folk say now that it is gone. At all events its end was glorfous, for it was swept away by the most disastrous storm that has visited Japan for the last twenty-six years. In fact, the waters of the Dalya-gawa are said to have risen higher than they have risen for the last 300 years, and 300 persons perished in the copper mine at Ashlo, near Nikko, and more than 200 houses, including several temples and hotels, as well as a town hall, were swept away in Nikko itself.-[Rail-

Wild Marshes of Mexica.

THERE is a part of the American continent seldom visited by sportsmen, which is a hive of winter game. It offers extraordinary inducements to the amateur shooter and a wide field for the market hunter. The chances are that it will remain for years a vast natural reserve and a place from which will come the birds to replenish annually the decimated flocks that winter on waters more easily reached. The territory embraces the far-extending marshes of Northeastern Mexico. It is a country of lagunas, or sluggish rivulets, scarce lower than the lands through which they flow. The soil

Cover is everywhere. With every advantage of climate, water and food, the ducks have sought it in millions, particularly as they are comparatively undisturbed, and the same leaders visit it year after year, taking their fresh offspring. It is known as the lagunas district. Railways have dodged it as far as possible, as building through it is costly in the extreme. It lies partly in the State of Coahulla and partly in Nuevo Leen, at a distance of from 100 to 200 miles beyond the Rio Grande. The Mexicans have no game laws to speak of, because they have never needed them. They are not sports-men as Gringos understand the term. Occasionally one of them takes a single-barreled fowling-piece, which came from Spain a century ago, or a musket which has drifted down from the States, goes out and murders a duck or two for dinner, but that is about the limit of the national shooting.—[New York Sun.

K IRIN itself is a beautiful city, picturesquely situated on the banks of the Sungari. The river is navigable during six months of the year to steamers of low draught. There is a weekly steamer to the railway, and so quickly are distances being shortened in Manchuria that recently the chief engineer. M. Jugovitch, covered the journey from Kirin to Harbin by steamer and train in twenty-one hours. It is five years since I was last in Kirin. The city being in military occupation, Russian soldiers are to be seen everywhere. The troops are under the command of Lieut.-Gen. Baron Von Stackelberg, commanding the Second Army Corps, who holds the highest command in the three provinces. The discipline of his troops is excellent, and their attitude toward the conquered worthy of commendation. Even the Tartar general admitted to me that, while at first the military occupation bore with exceeding harshness upon the people, it was now as little oppressive as a military occupation could be. The autumn maneuvers had recently been held, and the troops were now dispersing. From their beautiful summer quarters across the river they were beautiful summer quarters across the river they were moving into winter quarters inside the city, the gen-eral's headquarters being the Confucian Temple.—[Correspondence London Times.

News from the Ant Hills.

ANY who are not sluggards have gone to the ant M and considered her ways, but the diligent little man's store of wisdom is not yet exhausted.

Woman is correct and so is "her." for most of the ants, as well as the bees, and all the workers of both species are females. And of these females all but the species are females. And of these females all but the queen are old maids, eschewing matrimony as a nuisance and an impediment to useful work. Now the astonishing discovery has been made that their celibacy constitutes no bar to their perpetuation of the species, at least for several generations. It has long been known that virgin queens, both of bees and of ants, lay eggs, and it has become known more recently that the workers, which never mate, do the same thing, but it has been assumed, from imperfect observation, that these eggs always hatch into drones or males, never into females of either the queen or the worker variety.

A German naturalist named Reichenbach has been putting the matter to a simple test, which, however, has occupied several years. In the spring of 1899 he imprisoned eleven worker ants in an observation nest Soon they laid eggs, which hatched not into males, but into workers. Later in the season, at the natural matling time in July, a few males were hatched out. The same thing was repeated next year. Then the colony had increased from the original eleven to some 300, only two or three dozen of which were males. The process was repeated in 1901, but the colony had begun to dwindle, and in 1902 it perished "from unknown cause and thus put an end to the experiment.

No perfect females (queens) were produced, although the insects were provided with an abundance of food. which is commonly supposd to favor the production of queens. But the workers were far in excess of the maies, which, according to the prevailing theory, should have constituted the entire product.

The remarkable fact is that these workers, instead of producing only males, which cannot carry on the species without mating, produced workers like themselves, which could and did do so. This went on for several generations.—[Chicago Tribune.

THE Lake Hemet Water Company is having prepared a complete plat book of the Hemet and Fairview lands, showing on a large scale the model irrigation and do-mestic water system supplying this valley. The plat will be kept up in the same manner as a municipal plat book and will be valuable for reference.

EFERENCE was made last week to the estab lishment of an interesting new industry in Los Angeles in the shape of an establishment for the manu facture of piano sounding boards, under charge of Alfred Dolge, the founder of Dolgeville, N. Y. The Mu-sical Age, a New York weekly, of March 14 had an article on this subject with a portrait of Mr. Dolge, also an extract from an elaborate article in the London Mu-sical Opinion and Music Trade Review, in which great credit is given to Mr. Dolge for his improvements for plane materials.

This interesting industry promises to add to the fame of Los Angeles as a growing manufacturing center, for the product of this factory will probably be shipped all over the world, if the expectations of Mr. Doige are re-alized. He believes, as stated last week, that in the woods of California and Arizona, dried in the open air in this sunny climate, he has found a material equal to that from which the celebrated violins of Cremona, Italy, are made,

Los Angeles County Business.

S OME interesting information regarding the resources of Los Angeles county and the condition of the ounty funds is given in the annual report of the Board county funds is given in the annual report of the Board of Supervisors for the year ended December 31, 1902, which was compiled by Clarence Mallard and F. E. Lopez. The Los Angeles county officials handle a large amount of money, the warrants paid in 1902 amounting to $2,120,918. On the other hand, the property being to $2,120,918. On the other hand, the property belonging to the county is estimated to be worth $3,505,964, while the bonded indebtedness of the county is only $333,500. The rate of taxation for 1902, outside cities, was $1.80 per hundred dollars, just the same as it was fourteen years ago, in 1889. Since then, it has varied from $1.30, the lowest, to $2.00, the highest. The assessed valuation is $118,266,624, there having been a gradual and steady increase during the past ten years, from $77,244,050 in 1893.

An interesting fact is the statement that the expense of the County Farm last year amounted to $29,236, walle the income of the institution was $10,593, of which $3888 was derived from the sale of oranges. There is probably not another establishment of this kind in the United States which makes a substantial income from the sale

Electric Power Plant.

LARGE electric power plant is to be located on Fos-A sil Creek, about 57 miles from Prescott. As the machinery required for this plant will be very heavy, the first step will be to build a wagon road from Mayer to Fresil Creek, a distance of 40 miles, the cost of which road will be not less than $30,000.

A N Arizona paper reports that the people of Florence, in Pinal county, are rejoicing over the expected early arrival of the Phoenix and Eastern Railroad. Active arrival of the Phoenix and Eastern Railroad. Active work on the grading of this road is now going forward. Florence has been in the dumps since the working out of the celebrated Silver King mine, twenty-five miles away, nearly twenty years ago. It is surrounded by a good agricultural country, in addition to promising mineral fields. With a new railroad and improved irrigation facilities Florence should become a place of congation facilities Florence should become a place of con-siderable importance.

Furniture Factory.

THE Pomona Times reports that the Pacific Furni-ture and Lumber Company has received the equipment formerly used in its plant at San Bernardino and has placed the machinery in the old winery building at Pomona, where about fifty men will be employed.

Revival of Tombstone.

THE Tucson Citizen has the following regarding the revival of Tombstone, once the leading mining camp of the terms are about twelve large mines now being the terms of the peninsula, though there are hundreds "prospects" and small claims awaiting the advent better smelting and transportation facilities before Arizona, through the reopening of the big silver mines:

"W. L. Johnson of Tombstone arrived in town yesterand he says the prospects of the town are looking very bright and the citizens are very anxious to see the steam freighter make its appearance in town which will be along about the first of the month. The camp, to a Englishman now residing in San Diego. Best of al, then is considerable coal in the mountains along the Parilic shore of the peninsula. Oil seepages have result been found, especially along the Gulf side, and he thinks, will be one of the most prosperous in the Territory, and this is the opinion of many who de in position to know. Mr. Johnson is interested in the Benton Wilson property which adjoins the Emerald mine to the south. Three claims are in the group, and many formed for its development. If the new oil-ting process is a success, there is no reason why should not become one of the best mining sections enough development has been done to show them up as enough development has been done to snow them up as a mighty good prospect. A shaft is down about 100 feet and considerable drifting has been in progress for some time, the drift being 5x7 feet and in the heart of the vein, which is from 25 to 30 feet wide. The ore is more or less in bunches. It is the intention of the company the shaft 500 feet and at that depth to cross cut. About 100 tons of rich silver ore with good values in gold and manganese are on the dump for shipment.
"Tombstone, has always had two great drawbacks—

pense will have been overcome with the railroad, and water for working purposes will come out of the mine. All the freight that reached the camp beretofore by wagon; now it will come direct from the manufacturing centers. The Consolidated Mining Company, which is composed of all the great producers that were running independently when Tombstone was at the zenith of prosperity, are pushing the work at the mines as fast as possible. The work is confined mostly on the surface in getting ready to install the necessary machinery and buildings. The work underground is hindered on account of the water. The large pumps are throw-ing out over 15,000,000 gallons of water every twenty-four hours and the water in the mines is diminishing very fast. The company will not have to do much de-velopment work before it can take out ore, as the mines are all well opened up, but considerable timber-ing will have to be done. New modern vertical com-partment shafts will tap the old openings and the machinery will be of the very latest type. Some of the mines are about 800 feet deep and miles of drifting and stoping was done before the properties closed down and it would be a fair estimate to say that fifty million dol lars' worth of ore has been taken out of these openings. At the surface these mines yielded a value of $6 to $10 in gold and at the bottoms values in gold were to $10 in gold and at the bottoms values in gold were found in some places to go as high as $500 to the ton. This leads experts to believe that with greater depth these mines will run to gold entirely, as did the mines in Leadville, Colo. The ores of this camp are very easy to treat and with the absence of silica they are self-fuxing, and for this reason the smelted paid a premium for ores that came out of the Cornet mine. for ores that came out of the Cornet mine.

About 300 men are employed at present and when operations are going full blast it is safe to say that between three and four thousand men will be working. E. B. Gage, president of the company, is an able man and he has associated with him some of the most suc-cessful business men in the East in this com-

THE manufacture of curlos is quite an important in-dustry in Southern California. The Rural Calfornian has the following in regard to an enterprise of this kind at Monrovia:

at Monrovia:
A new and thriving industry has been established in Monrovia, and which bids fair to bring that burg into great repute. This new industry consists in a plant for the manufacture of curios. It was organized last May and it has proved a success since the first day it was opened for business. The material employed by the company is gathered entirely from the orange orchards of the district and adjacent mountain sides. Many articles of use and ornament are manufactured from express. cles of use and ornament are manufactured from orange wood, the branches of palms, yucca spikes and the beau-tiful manzanita wood, which is found high up on the mountain sides among the clouds. The company em-ploys at present fourteen hands, and is unable to fill all the orders which are being received from along the Coast as far as Montana. It may no be necessary to travel to Mexico and foreign countries to purchase images of gods and saints, and bric-a-brac and relics of priceless value to the curio hunters, for it must be presumed that the factory at Monrovia will be able to supply such demands. Of course a little fic-tion as to dates may have to be employed, but those who have suddenly acquired wealth and as suddenly a taste for curios and beautiful and useful things taste for curios and beautiful and useful things will be just as well satisfied with modern make as they would by those curios fashloned by the handleraft of the ancients. We are not surgrised to learn that the company with its fourteen employés is unable to keep up with the orders. It would indeed be strange if it were otherwise.

FIELD NOTES.

Improvement Predicted.

HE leading fruit-trade paper of New York announces that Florida and Jamaica oranges are out of the market and California's will now have the Prices have been good where the quality of the ornia fruit has been up to standard. "On every-California fruit has been up to standard. thing showing good condition the market was steady and the demand was good. CONTINUED reports of the finding of the Mexican orange worm in the orchards of Los Angeles county leads to the remark that so far as I can discover there has not been one of these worms found anywhere in Southern California. The reports come from the unusual prevalence of the common orange caterpillar that has been found in the groves for years. I have not noticed these statements heretofore because an investigation showed that the oranges contained only the common worm and in no case on record has the Mexican maggot been found. Place is given these rumors for the purpose of making the growers more vigilant. Should the Mexican pest appear there will be no attempt to conceal it.

Rust not Fatal.

SEEING the usual amount and quality of asparagus upon the local market led to the inquiry as to the progress of the asparagus rust the second year of its appearance in California. It has decimated the fields appearance in California. It has decimated the fields in the East and ruined several farming communities depending upon this industry, and the problem is, will this disease prove as fatal in the dryer climate of this State. One grower at Hynes, whose asparagus plants were One grower at Hynes, whose asparagus plants were stricken with rust last season, says he is turning out as fine a quality of asparagus this year as usual. The disease did not affect the roots, nor did it retard the shoots nor diminish their these streets. shoots nor diminish their strength and number. This is good news to local gardens, but it may require another season or two before the matter is settled, as the rust does not appear in the beginning of the year.

Wil: the Convention Meet?

THE signing of Senate Bill 634 by Gov. Pardee not only leaves the State without quarantine protection I only leaves the State without quarantine protection temperarily, but through the abolishment of the State Board of Horticulture, may interfere with the holding of the State Fruit Growers' Convention. Partial preparation has been made by the local committee, but it is not known whether the committee will go on with the work under the changed conditions. If the Governor appoint a State Horticultural Commissioner at once the convention could be yet held under the auat once the convention could be yet held under the au-spices of that office, provided the committeemen, A. P. Griffith and G. H. A. Goodwin have so far advanced the programme as to make it possible. The decision in this matter should be announced soon.

Consolidation Completg.

N ANSWER to two or three questions wanting inside facts concerning the joining together of the Southern California Fruit Exchange with the independent shippers I will say that nothing has been given out further than the complete publication contained in a recent number of the Daily Times which I presume all have read. For several days last week the joint committee was engaged in completing the details of the agreement between the heretofore antagonistic systems of market-ing the citrus fruits of the State. That the new move-ment is of stupendous interest to the citrus industry is conceded by all. The growers who had digested The Times article all seem pleased that the union has been brought about and hope the new plan will work as well as the promoters expect. It will have a fair show and there is no reason for failure in sight at the present

The Gum-shee Editor.

W HAT matters it should the notes this week have W the flavor of endogenous production? Nothing but gum boots and water-proofs could give them the savor of reality till this period of wetness disappears, when the Los Angeles River, with its staid old clenga that usually swallows the heaviest precipitation and thirsts for more—when this stream chooses to furnish feed for the great Wilmington dredger, then the farmer. food for the great Wilmington dredger, then the farmer should put on peat shoes or bid farewell to orange picking till this spell of weather ceases. However, it bids fair for future items when the gum shoe shall be discarded and the orchards become navigable without rubbers. It is in such seasons as this that agriculture assumes its wanted proportions and gives occasion for future progress as well as present prosperity.

A Smile of Approbation.

PERHAPS you have noticed that the farmer's smile is of unusual dimension these rainy days. He smiles so broadly, in fact, that the corners of his mouth almost pass each other upon the back of his neck. He feeds his team and pickets his cow to the music of myriads of frogs. Frog concerts are as common in Southern California this spring as they are in the sloughs and slashes of the Mississippi bottom. It is rare, sweet music indeed, for the pipes of these am-phibian creatures have lain buried in the dry adobe of their now festive feeding grounds for nearly a decade, only the more favored cienegas furnishing enough wet-ness to release the imprisoned songsters. Concerts of this character are replete with promises that the head gate is not a supreme factor nor the tappoon a per-petual menace to the peace of the farmer. Twenty inches of rainfall means music in the heart of the irri-gator as well as in the throat of the batrachians that sing the livelong night.

No Respect for Age.

ON A CORNER of Third and San Pedro streets stand Othree palm trees that illustrate how the mighty may be fallen and yet stand upright for the public to scoff at. These great boles are covered with advertising signs—shoe ads, tobacco placards, soap, toys, coffee, cereal and nostrum announcements—so thickly shingled on, that the trunks of the palms are hidden entirely. I noticed some time ago that a wealthy resident of San Francisco had purchased a palm tree here, requiring two flat cars to carry it to its new home in the North. Here is more timber for those who are willing to move these big trees to an environment where they will be appre-ciated. Fortunately, the residents of Los Angeles are engaged in growing palms for the next generation to admire, but the city should not allow the old landmarks to be descrated in the way that disgraces the venerable palms of San Pedro street.

The Florida White Fly.

S OME authorities have considered the county ordinances, prohibiting in a practical way the introduction of Florida nursery trees, entirely too rigid. Los Angeles and Riverside counties have especially strong ordinances. But the danger warrants the severity of the quarantine. A dispatch from Jacksonville says the white fly is the worst insect pest which the Florida growers have to contend against and commends the horticultural have to contend against and comments the norticularial commissioners of California for their vigilance in keeping out this pest. "The loss to our nursery trade," says the dispatch, "is a bagatelle compared to the loss that will overtake our growers if this evil and miserable pest is allowed to spread over Florida. It pollutes fruit more completely than any other parasite; covers it, through its supplementary growth, the sooty mold, with a black, repulsive smutch; dwarfs its size, prevents it from coloring, leaves it a stunted, smeared and disgust-ing object. The fly is so nimble and clusive that it is aimost impossible to destroy it; it is vulnerable only when in the stationary form of the egg.". How would the growers of California like to have this pest added to their already overflowing measure of orchard calamities?

THE corporations of Southern California except the The corporations of Southern California except the municipal and one small railway corporation, are giving the authorities all possible assistance in the fight against migratory weeds. The subject of noxious weed control is on again and the heavy rains will intensify the battle against this class of infection. As usual the cities are largely to blame for the dissemination of weeds. More trouble has been encountered in getting one railroad right of way cleaned within the city limits of Los Angeles and the streets disinfected then was met in getting the weeds removed from those than was met in getting the weeds removed from thou-sands of acres of farming land. Illinois is said to have the best laws upon noxious weed control. Yet the farmers who live within a score of miles of Chicago report that no matter how well the laws are enforced locally the weed pest overruns their farms.

When the campaign against the Russian thistle begins again one of the first drives should be made against the ugain one of the first drives should be made against the municipal corporations. What use is it to patrol the country roads with the hoe when the city streets and one or two railroads fail to assist in the good work of eradicating this thistle. Unless prosecution follows the present county ordinance against noxious weed maintenance there seems little hope that the few refractory parties can be brought to terms. The farmers have done their part in this war for the last two years.

The Pear Redivivus.

THE inveterate pear malady, the blight, that became the subject of a general state inquiry one year ago seems to have abated somewhat in the South. This fact was noted several months ago from reports and observation showing that the disease has become less virulent and that in many cases the stricken trees had put on new tops and promised to be productive. Should this restoration become permanent the growers would yet have the codling moth to reckon with. Just to show the tendency in pear culture I picked up an interesting item in a small way, no less than the planting of thou-sands of pear trees in a new section.

In the development of the Rock Creek country Immidiately north of Mounts Lowe and Wilson, one community has planted pear trees as follows: S. J. Brubaker, 500; A. Martin, 900; L. W. Traver, 400; A. S. Wella, 870; F. K. Barton, 375 and A. Prunner, 300, besides others in smaller lots. Apple trees are being planted in large numbers in this neighborhood, making an interesting item of tendency as well as of some hor-ticultural importance. But for occasional late frosts that nip the almonds, apricots and other fruits there are small areas, over the mountains, of ideal fruit lands and The Times gladly gives publicity to the development of these adjacent lands that may help to solve the prob-lem of the home apple supplies and pears for the local trade and canneries. There are already many fine ap-ple orchards in that section and a much larger area devoted to that fruit farther to the westward. So insect pests have disturbed the orchardists and may be kept out for a long time.

Flight of Butterflies.

CORONA was in the path of an immense sur Unigratory butterflies a few days ago. A simil nomenon was witnessed at Highland Park ten d and other sections no doubt saw hordes of these zig-zagging their course, but always holding few feet of a direct western line. Several years flight of butterflies passed over Azusa, require whole day to disappear. They flutter along from 2 200 feet or so above the ground, individuals occa-descending to rest upon the foliage to resume mysterious journey with the main body which pauses. I have not seen specimens caught and and will rely upon some scientific reader to di these butterflies, for such flights are of rare in anywhere but in California. There must be a mul-of caterpillars where these beautiful little pa-originate and it would be interesting to learn at they are bred and fed before reaching the adult size

With the exception of a rare visitation of cut With the exception of a Tare visitation of cut and the censtant presence of apple worms Sout California has almost complete exemption from tribes of butterflies and moths. It is not so in the One year ago I saw thousands of acres of forest killed by caterpillars; one State has spent nearly million dollars in fighting the Gypsy moth: epidemy million dollars in fighting the Gypsy moth; epic tacks from army worms, tent caterpillars and a a other kinds occur annually, but there is only one with migratory habits in the East. Squirrels and gophers are to the farmer as knights of the "jimmy" or the counter thief a the business man of the city. The losses from the dedations of the underground dwellers of field and as in Southern California aggregate much more than losses from thievery, and no surveillance can prevent squirrels and gophers from getting in their work pecially in seasons of abundant wild growth like present. These pests breed everywhere when fed protected by the wild herbage. I saw about an arm grain in the San Fernando Valley cut as close a sheep pasture by squirrels—cut apparently as an servatory from which to watch the man with the Judge Houghton lost 138 two-year-old apple trees season by gophers from an orchard of 200, and the pests become so numerous that crops cannot be grawithout irrigating water sufficient to flood the lande sionally and drown them in their burrows. Were the pests as uncontrollable in the dry lands as in the drorange growing would be a very difficult proposition deed. I know of a case where 600 acres of wheat a entirely ruined by squirrels. entirely ruined by squirrels.

In the good old days of yore, however, matters a great deal worse. Judge Houghton, while in a miniscent mood the other day said he planted nearly in the state of the country in 1854. iniscent mood the other day said he planted nearly acres in wheat in Santa Clara county in 1854. The season the rust ruined his entire crop. The second the smut destroyed all this grain and the third squirrels took every spear of it. Another season judge paid five cents a pound for his seed wheat sold the crop to the distillers for two cents. It hands were paid $75 a month and board, and there but indifferent means of marketing the products of land raised under these discouraging circumstances.

THOUSANDS of small poultry plants will prosper all over the land. They have done so and will continue to so for all time to come. All those who keep a see towls within their capacity to handle will make a post. Many who have gone so far as to have 600 or a tessand hens have done fairly well with them, but they a very few have shown the ability to handle a large plant with several thousand hens and succeed. This has been begun so often and discarded that one might conclude that it was not possible to conduct such plast and succeed with it. When we look about us re plate and succeed with it. When we look about use find but few in the whole world that have the ability to succeed with large business enterprises of any kind. This being true in the other followings in business life, why should we expect more of poultry than other products? We could cite several large failures in each of which none of the ownher products? We could cite several large failures in a poultry business, in each of which none of the own-axis and anything about poultry. Either one-fourth of a box of gelatine should soak in this cold stater for a half hour; a whole box of gelatine correct with a cup of cold water should stand an hour, and it cannot be hurrled by heat. When a part of the cream is whipped and a part used without whipping, the latter should be scalded and the sugar added to that. Any one with ingenuity should be able to vary these to suit themselves and the exigencies of the larder. In this way, small amounts of fruit, jelly, etc., may be utilized.—[New York Tribune.

The Bacon Hog.

LIVE STOCK.

M ANY breeders of hogs and professors of animal hus-bandry believe that the hog men of the corn belt can profitably breed bacon hogs, that is, a lengthy, rangy animal with a large percentage of side meat, in which the fat and lean are well distributed. That these hogs can be raised in the United States no one decleahogs can be raised in the United States in one declear. If an animal of the proper conformity is chosen and this animal is fed peas, beans, barley, oats, shorts, etc., a first-class bacon hog can be secured. The vital point, however, is whether or not the raising and feeding of such animals will be more profitable than the production of the hogs now received at all the principal mar-ket points in the Central West.

Orange Judd Farmer has looked this matter up very carefully and recently interviewed a number of the pack-ers and commission men at the Chicago stockyards. Without exception the representatives of these great market interests agree that it will not pay the farmers in the corn belt to breed the bacon type exclusively. There is no established market for this class. Nearly all of them agree that with the proper feeds we can raise as good bacon hogs as they do in Ireland, Denmark, England or Canada. The fact remains that our farmers do not do it, and it is the opinion of these men that they never will.

Honey Crop of 1903.

IT IS, of course, far too early to attempt any forecast T 18, of course, far too early to attempt any force of the probable honey crop of 1903, but it is the fithat the abundant winter rains in southern counties have started an unusual growth honey-producing plants. If the spring reconstruction of the s that honey-producing plants. If the spring rains are even ordinarily good there will be an immense crop of honey-producing bloom. If the bees are there they will get it. Bees are reported as generally in good condition, with abundant stores carry them through. In Kings county there is likely to be a serious contest with the fruit growers, who insist that the bees are responsible for the spread of the blight, and propose to put poison in their orchards unless all bee keepers remove their bees from the vicinity of any pear orchard during the blooming season. What will be done about it does not yet appear. The weight of authority is in favor of the contention of the orchard-ists, but the bee men are not convinced. They contend that the blight is due to the extreme richness of the Kings county soil, which when water is applied, pro-duces more sap than the tree can carry. This redundant sap, say the bee keepers, ferments, and the fer-mented sap forms a suitable lodging place for the blight bacteria ever present in the air. They claim, there-fore, that the blight will continue whether bees are present or not. There was an effort made last year to ascertain the truth as to the responsibility of the bees for the spread of the blight by the voluntary removal of all bees from the vicinity of the orchards while the trees were in bloom. This, it is expected, would demon-strate that the spread of the blight was not the result strate that the spread of the blight was not the result of the bees' work. As usual in such cases, however, there were enough bee keepers who refused to remove their bees to destroy the value of the experiment, and those who did so had their trouble without learning anything of importance. It is doubtful whether the supervisors have authority to compel the removal of the bees, but neither do we see how orchardists can be prevented from protecting their crops by poisoned honey.—[San from protecting their crops by poisoned honey.-[San Francisco Chronicle.

THE CUGAR BEET.

Sugar Beet in San Joaquin.

THE largest acreage ever planted to sugar beets in San Joaquin county will be seeded this season. The first planting is already up, and at intervals of from two or three weeks more seed will be placed in the ground, so that not all of the crop will mature at the same time and crowd the factory at Crockett, which handles the vegetables. Between Tracy and Bethany, in San Joaquin county about 4000 acres will be put in beets, while about the same acreage will be seeded in Contra Costa and Solano counties this season.

There was some anxiety caused by the Crockett fac-tory closing down, but it is certainly only a temporary shut-down, for the same company that owns the plant is paying expenses and rent on property which will be seeded to beets this year, and it certainly would not grow the vegetables unless they were to be converted into sugar when they are ready to be crushed.

There is a lot of work connected with preparing the ground properly for sugar beets, and at present the company is working about 100 men and 250 head of horses on the 4000 acres in the southern part of the county. Before the fast storm a portion of the land was irrigated, but it will not be necessary to use water for some time to come, as plenty of moisture was received to put nd in good shape.

A RACE OF STRANGE SWAMP DWELLERS FOUND IN NEW GUINEA.

[Sydney Correspondence London Express:] The acting administrator of New Guinea. Sir Francis P. Winter, in a report to the Governor-General of the Commonwealth, describes a curious people who live in the swamps in New Guinea.

They are called the Ahgaiambo, and have lived in swamps for a period which goes back beyond native tradition. They dwell in houses raised on piles about twelve feet above the surface of the water, which they traverse in canoes dug out of logs. These they propel standing up with a pole.
In addition they are expert swimmers, gliding through beds of reeds or over masses of floating vegetable mat-ter with ease. They never leave the morass, and their mode of life has reacted upon their physical character. with the result that they are not able to walk properly on hard ground, their feet bleeding if they try to do so. Sir Francis Winter describes two of the tribe-a man and woman—as follows:

"The man would have been a fair-sized native had his body from the hips downward been proportionate to the upper part of his frame. He had a good chest. and-for a native-a thick neck, and his arms matched

"His feet were short and broad, and very thin and flat, with-for a native-weak-looking toes. This last feature was still more noticeable in the woman, whose toes were long and slight, and stood out rigidly from the foot as though they possessed no joints. The feet of both the man and the woman seemed to rest on the ground something like wooden feet would do. The skin above the knees of the man was in loose fc'ds, and developed than those of the calf.

"In the ordinary native the skin on the loins is smooth and tight, and the anatomy of the body is clearly discernible; but the Ahgaiambo man had several folds of thick skin or muscle across the loins which concealed the outline of his frame. On placing one of our natives, of the same height, alongside the marsh man we noticed that our native was about three inches the sinews and muscles around the knee were not well developed. The muscles of the shin were much better higher at the hips.

"I had a good view of the man while he was standing sideways toward me, and in figure and carriage looked to me more apelike than any human being that I have seen. The woman, who was of middle age, was much more slightly formed than the man, but her legs were short and siender in proportion to her figure, were short and siender in proportion to her figure, which from the waist to the knees was clothed in a wrapper of native cloth."

"EXTRA CHOICE."

Harold and Fred, the two young sons of a Boston man, have found themselves failing into the reprehensible habit of using some rather vulgar slang words, and on one or two occasions when under extreme provocation they had used terms that some people would classify with real "cuss words." These words had popped out under peculiarly aggravating circumstances, but the boys were manly enough to want to steer clear of the vulgar and ungentlemanly habit of swearing, therefore the elder of them said to his brother:
"I'll tell you what let's do, Fred; let's fine ourselves wery time we use slang or 'swear' words."
Fred agreed to this, and his brother said:

Fred agreed to this, and his brother said:
"Well, then, supposing we agree that we'll have to put a cent into mother's charity-box every time we say
'gee,' and 2 cents every time we say 'gosh,' and—let me see, how much ought we to pay for 'thunder?'
"Oh, 4 cents, perhaps," said Fred, and then he added,
"but I know some words that are worth a quarter; don't you?"—[Morris Wade, in Lippincott's.

SOMETHING ABOUT ONE OF THE SMALLEST BUT MOST DESTRUCTIVE OF ANIMALS.

Of all the carnivorous animals there is no one more generally dreaded than the Weasel, especially by those who make a business of poultry-raising. Their size is—in the case of most species—quite insignificant, but their ability as hunters and the ease with which they manage to crawl through very small openings make them of peculiar danger to chicken roosts. There are many species of weasels and they belong to the same kind of animals as do the otters, minks, skunks, badgers and martens. The famous Ermine of Europe, from which is obtained the valuable fur, known by the same name, belongs to this group and has the same glossy brown summer coat as have minks and weasels, but it changes in winter to a snowy white.

All of these animals, martens, wearels, eac., belong to a family called the Mustelidae, because they pos glands which exude a liquid of peculiar and unpleasant odor. This serves a protective purpose, as there are very few animals which attack the Weasel, or, having killed it, will endeavor to eat it, because of the odor which seems to taint the flesh as well. The Skunk is a distant relative of the weasel family and possesses the most powerful glands for its own protection of any known Weasels in general inhabit thickly-settled portions of the country as freely as they do the wilder sections and show little fear of man, fighting him bravely when cornered, and preying unreservedly upon his feathered property every night in the week if undisturbed. They never eat the flesh—unless it be the head—of a fowl, but suck its blood from an incision in the throat for the making of which the Weasel's teeth are so admir-ably adapted. Many flesh-eating animals, such as bears. racoons, badgers, etc., are known to est other food, like honey, berries, fruit and vegetable substances, but the Weasel seems to be so constituted that nothing but blood will satisfy its appetite. And there is apparently no limit to that appetite so that one night's work in the poultry yard is often sufficient to ruln a fine flock. In its wild habitat the Weasel feeds on the blood of quall, grouse, rabbits and other wild animals which it is able to kill. Like a buildog, a Weasel in fighting goes for the throat of its victim, its long front teeth easily being able to reach the jugular vein through any ordinary coat of hair or fur.

In the United States there are seven species of Weasels, but exactly how many of these are found in Southern California' is not well known. The Long-tailed Weasel, shown in the accompanying photo, is the largest one found here, though the Bridled Weasel, a beawtiful species from Texas and Mexico, is a trifle larger. As a rule, the carnivorous animals of a cold country are larger than those of the same species found in a wa climate. Thus the Grizzly and Polar Bears of the No. Temperate and Frigid Zones, are much larger than their rs, the bears of Mexico and Central America it is with the Weasel; the great weasels, minks and martens of Northern Europe far outstrip our species in size as well as in daring and ferocity. Their fur, too, is size as well as in daring and ferocity. Their fur, too, is much more valuable owing to its greater density and fineness, caused by the colder climate in which they live. Most of the extreme northern species turn white in winter as does also the Little Ermine of the Eastern United States. This small naimal, which is only about a foot long, tail and all, has a brown coat in summer and a snow-white one in winter, the extreme tip of the tail being left black. The White Weasel, found rather sparsely scattered throughout the United States also undergoes this change, but its fur is of no such value as that of the Siberian species. The Little Black Mink of the United States produces a fur known as American Sable, though not nearly so valuable as the European Sable's fur.

nother common California animal is the Yellow-eked Weasel, a relative of the Bridled Weasel already mentioned. It is the most abundant of all the family among the ranches of the lower country and, owing to its small size and neutral color often escapes observa-

among the ranches of the lower country and, owing to its small size and neutral color often escapes observation where really plentiful. In the northern part of this State, the Least Weasel replaces the present species, and though much smaller does almost equal damage.

Comparatively few of any species of this family are found in the higher hills, they being mainly residents of the more thickly settled lowlands, and foothill sections. Many strange stories are told of their fighting abilities and it is well known that any animal of their size, and some a great deal larger, will go a long way around some a great deal larger, will go a long way around rather than meet an angry Weasel. The hawks of the lowlands frequently are seen struggling in midair with one of these animals of which they would gladly let go one of these animals of which they would gradly let go were they able. Often the hawk in striking his prey grasps the lithe brown body too far back, and, as a result, the Weasel is able to reach a vital spot with his long and sharp front teeth. In the struggle which ensues, both fighters usually die together, for even though the bird kills the animal, still the laiter's teeth are so firmly locked in throat or heart that the victor dies in the grann of his dead victim. The bodies of the dies in the grasp of his dead victim. The bodies of the participants in such tragedies are not infrequently found, especially in the newly-cleared farms along the coast, where, until recently heavy groves of willow grew, furnishing admirable nesting sites for the birds.

Frequently the Weasel, if pressed by hunger, will attack game much larger than itself, notably rabbits and ground squirrels. In the North, especially in Canada where porcupines are plentiful, the larger weasel will often enter the dens of that well-protected animal, and kill the young "porkles" even in the risk of its own life. Often, in fact usually, the intruder is transfixed by a myriad sharp quills at one blow of the porcupine's tail, and so dies miserably. In this section, however, wensels, and especially the long-tailed species kill many of the hill rabbits, entering the burrows as freely as does the Ferret (which, by the way, belongs to the same family as the Weasel,) and, having cut the defenseless rabbit's throat and sucked its blood, leaves the body whete the kill was made.

Weasels, usually live in small caves when in the Weasels, usually live in small caves when in the vacant spaces under ranch houses, barns, chicken coops, etc., in more settled localities. An old and locally-laid stone wall is also a favorite hiding place and several families will frequently live together in harmony in such a convenient "apartment house." The young of such a convenient "apartment house." The young of the Weasel are usually four or five in number and are born in early spring on this coast, but later in colder and more inclement climates. The families remain tountil the young are at least one year old, possibly longer, while the adults remain paired for life, or at least until death separates them. These animals fight bravely for each other and for their young, seeming to fear nothing. Their sight is very poor during the hours of daylight, but, like that of the owls, and many of the cut tribe, excellent at night. The sense of smell and the keenness of instinct (if such it be.) of the Weasel are proverbial, yet it lacks that very easential quality of all good fighters—discretion. A Weasel will turn from nothing on earth, no matter how large or how powerful, consequently its numbers are kept within reasonable bounds by such animals as chance cross its path and which it attacks with great ferocity and for no apparent reason. Like the skunks and badgers, wearels come out more plentifully just after a heavy shower, and at this time of the year—or possibly a month later—it is no unusual thing to come upon a happy family or these animals playing near their home cave in some dry wash or rocky canon of the lower hills. There is at present a fine family inhaviting a rocky little canon in one of our larger parks, where they may be seen at play almost as sunny afternoon. HARRY H. DUNN.

NO. 8-HOW HE PUNISHED THE SEA ROBBERS.

My killing of the sea lion, as described in the last chapter, made a tremendous sensation, and the people picked me up and carried me back to the city on their shoulders, each one laughing and shouting as we went.

when the city was reached they carried me through the streets, and it was a good hour before they set me down at my own door. After dinner I took fifty men and returned to the dead body of the monster and cut away his tusks. I gave the King one, but kept the other to show to my people when I should get home. When the tide rose, the waves took the body out to

"They have bows and arrows, while we have only spears, and they manage their cances far better than we do. They are sea robbers. About once in three months they land on our island, and no matter how hard we fight they beat us and take away much plunder. Now that you have killed the monster of the sea, if we could only win a great victory over these robbers we should be a happy people."

"When will they come again?" I asked.

"When will they come again?" I asked.
"In about four days, I think. They always come in the full of the moon. Do you think anything can be

The King and I taked for a long time and laid our plans. I did not want the help of his people to fight. I wanted them to be on the watch for the robbers and let me know as soon as the fellows landed, and then would do the rest.

Next day I cut a lot of switches from the trees and toughened them by holding them over a fire, and I had sentinels stationed on the senshore to give me early

AN INTERESTING WAY OF TRYING TO BREAK AN OPPONENT'S EGG.

By a Special Contributor.

An Easter game which does not have to do with eggs is like a Thanksgiving dinner without turkey.

Almost every boy has played at breaking eggs, that is knocking his egg against some other boy's egg to see which of the two will break. It is easential, of course, that both eggs should be hard boiled, otherwise the contents of the egg which is broken are likely to spread

SAN DIEGO NOTES.

Red Star Lodge, Knights of Pythias, voted last night to form a stock company for the erection of a Pythian temple, to cost $40,060. The lodge subscribed $4000 to the stock. Assurances of $10,000 have been secured.

This forenoon a dozen or fifteen of the Chinese lottery men, whose places were raided Thursday evening by request of the Anti-Saloon League, aprang a surprise on the prosecutors by pleading guilty and paying fines of $50 each. Usually they have fought the cases and been acquitted.

Arrangements are being made to run excursion trains from Los Angeles to this city on the 30th inst. the day set for planting 2000 trees in the big park by the Foresters and other fraternal organizations.

If Southern California is soon to have a second Dolgeville here, the early career and subsequent accomplishments of its energetic founder will be of interest. At the age of 17, with a common-school education, and having served an apprenticeship in his father's plano factory at Leipsic, Alfred landed at Castle Garden, with illtie or no money, and after some vicissitudes, found work with Mathushek, the veteran American plano maker, returning to Germany in 1867. Again reaching the United States in 1888, he reëntered the employment of Mathushek, and, while retaining this situation, made some small importations of plano-hammer leather and plano wire on his own account, which resulted favorably, and led to his leaving Mathushek in 1869, when he was not yet 21 years of age, and beginning business on his own account by marrying an estimable young lady, without fortune. He set up as an importer of plano materials on a cash capital of $500 saved from his earnings and his previous ventures with German leather and wire.

In 1871 Dolge began the manufacture of felt in Broqklyn with four workmen, but his force had increased to fifty-three operatives when, in 1874, he purchased the old tannery, and with it 1000 horse power of water power at Brockett's Bridge, a hamlet of about a hundred inhabitants, eight miles by wagon road north of Little Falla, Herkimer county. N. Y., a station on the New York Central Railroad, seventy-nine miles northwest of Albany and 240 miles from New York—paying therefor $7000 in seven annual payments. The Brooklyn felt works were immediately removed to Brockett's Bridge, at that time little more than "a splace in the woods." without stores or railway communication, and took with them such of the Brooklyn this or head in the new location, the others being unable to endure the privations of this The bee keepers of the county met in this city today, and effected an organization. They elected G. W. Hawley chairman, and W. D. French secretary-treasurer.

Red Star Lodge, Knights of Pythias, voted last night to form a steep county.

Brockett's Bridge became Dolgeville: a rallway was constructed, connecting with the New York Central at Little Falls: fine stores, magnificent schools, an elegant Turn Halle, and other accessories of civilized existence sprang into bein- under the magical wand of the Dolge management, and today Dolgeville has a population of about 2500 inhabitants, and is one of the brightest, liveliest and most picturesquely-located manufacturing villaces in the United States, and stands a magnificent monument to the tireless energy of its founder. "Why, do you know that since Mr. Dolge gave up ranching at Lamanda Park two years ago, and began making plano sounding boards in this city, he cannot fill all of his orders. His plant is at Sixth and Matee streets. He now makes a sounding board superior to any in the East. He says our sunshine does it—matures a board designed by nature herself for nothing so exclusive as a sounding board. After long experimenting, Mr. Dolge took an armful of these boards to Chicago, about a year ago, and they were so superior to other similar products that piano manufacturers gave him orders enough to keep his factory running a year.

Fred Dalton, aged 15, was struck by a west-bound Santa Fé Overland train near the Buena Vista-street bridge at 2.45 o'clock yesterday afternoon, and instantly killed, his body being ground to a pulp under the wheels. The accident happened a few feet south of the new steel bridge of the Santa Fé Railroad across the Los Angeles River, and from the evidence of those who witnessed the accident, it would appear that if anybody was to blame, it was the left home yesterday morning, he stated, to his mother that he was going 16 Redondo, but instead went up the river with several componies of a day's work. He probably gave that excuse to get away from home for the entire day, because he did not go to Redondo, but instead went up the river with several companions, and spent the day playing about the water.

She wouldn't let him into the house. She berated him roundly for presuming to investigate the case. She unlimbered her tongue, he says, and worked it so rapidly in defense of her position, that he hardly had an opportunity to explain his errand, and then she slammed the door in his face. The Administrator returned to Los Angeles and consulted with his attorney, with the result that the court was requested to issue a citation for the appearance of Mrs. Page to show cause why she should not make the disclosure required by law. A stormy scene is promised when Mrs. Page appears in court, as she has a sharp tongue.

Investigation by the Coroner also brought out a peculiar state of affairs, Deputy Coroner Summerfield, who took charge of the case, found Dickey's body in the rooms of a Pasadena undertaker, in preparation for cremation. The death certificate was signed by Mrs. J. A. Green, Mrs. S. L. Page and John J. Denton, the "healer." None of the number, it is said, is a licensed physician.

Under a misconstruction of the law the undertaker was about to cremate the body, thinking he had that right, but he ceased operations when ordered to do so by the deputy Coroner, and an inquest on the remains has been set for 11 o'clock Monday morning, when an autopsy will be performed and the Christian Scientists will be summoned to tell what they know about the cause of death, provided they really think the man'is dead.

Wife Aged Eleven.

A curious matrimonial case came the other day before the District Court at Simferopol. A bride of a few moints' standing, and of eleven years of age, sued her husband for desertion and the non-fulfilliment of a pre-nuptial contract. Both the parties were Tartars. The child-wife is described as a prepossessing girl of shy demeanor.

Although desertion was proved, the court held that the marriage was in the eyes of Russian law invalid, but it pronounced for the pre-nuptial contract, under which the plaintiff was to receive a dower of £1000. The defendant was a well-to-do farmer and sheep breeder, and was just three times the age of his repudiated child-wife.—[Odessa Correspondent London Mail.]

Later Garcia told Patrolman Leon about the trouble, and the officer searched him, but found no weapons. Last night Garcia again went to the saloon, and demanded his cards, but Marchese drove him out of the place and pursused him nearly a block when Garcia turned and fred two shots at his enemy. Neither shot took effect, and five minutes later Garcia was disarmed, handcuffed and waiting for a patrol wagon to take him to jail. He still declares he will kill Marchese.

After an interesting business meeting, the programme of the day was given. The guests were seated for refreshments at a mahogany table formerly belonging to the ancestors of Mrs. Bowers. Toasts for twenty-seven brides have been offered around it, and many famous southerners have sat about it. The table is sixty feet long, is highly polished, and carved, and is a work of art. These plotters reckon without their host, and have an inadequate idea of magnitude of their project. In the first place they misapprehend the feelof the great body of workingmen n this prosperous community; they have a misconception of the temof the leading spirits of Los Angeles if they think such a demonstratio will be permitted to gain headway without opposition; and again they re the fact that they will call down nselves the whole weight o sh forward their virtual conspiracy inst the President. But employers of labor and captains of industry in Los Angeles should not sit idle while these stewings and fons are going on, and rely entirely on "a healthy public sentiment" to overcome them. The exact plans of the conspirators cannot be retald Nobody knows where they victims of their attack, however, ald be the cause of all. The steam roads, the building industry and the manufacturing districts are to be attacked, according to the plans of the labor leaders. The flag was raised by the electricians' strike. Sympathetic walk-outs are said to be next in order, to disorganize things and make con-fusion worse confounded in May.

"Forewarned is forearmed." The first thing to do is to head off the uprising if possible, and if that can't be done to equelch it as soon as it fairly shows its head. This is not San Francisco. The business men of Los Angeles will have the support of the great majority of workers themselves in any such con-test. They only need to get together and form an effective organization-to unite and prepare to fight." It is only a small handful of vicious men that is really bent on trouble; they are doing all the plotting. They will easily and quickly be beaten if the vast army of their opponents is formed in a solid phalanx early in the game.

Henry E. Huntington's vision is long and broad; so is Mr. Dolge's. They see the rapid building-up of Southern California, and look beyond and far away. They take in the expansion of the trade of this Coast and the development of our relations with distant peoples. They are going to build a model town in Los Angeles county, not only because they believe it furnishes an ideal location for such an experiment, but for sound business an experiment, but for sound business reasons. In his address to the multitude at Huntington's caliber would not have Chicago, which packed the magnificent Auditorium to the suffocation point, Roosevelt dwelt upon the doctrine of Monroe with the same splendid vigor, clear understanding and resolute positiveness that characterize all his addresses to the people, and his official messages to the Congress of the repubof free advertising, all over the world. great principles set out in the Monroe doctrine he warned the people against aggressiveness too pronounced toward the neighboring nations across the great sea, and against which the principles of Monroe stand as a bulwark construction of a building have been taken by the appointment of a commit-tee of well-known citizens, who will for the preservation of the safety and unity of this republic, and for the conservation of the interests of this great, free people. As the President well said upon that occasion, "I believe in the Monroe doctrine with all my heart and soul; I am convinced that the immense majority of our fellow-countrymen so believe in it; but I would prefer to see us abandon it rather than to see us put it forward and bluster about and yet fail to build up the efficient fighting strength which, in the last resort, can alone make it respected by any strong foreign power whose interest it may ever happen to be to violate it.

"Boasting and blustering are as ob-jectionable among nations as among individuals, and the public men of a great nation owe it to their sense of national self-respect to speak cour-teously of foreign powers, just as a brave and self-respecting man treats brave and self-respecting sall around him courteously."

The officious meddling of politicians was undoubtedly at the whole difficulty, in the prolongation of this particular strike, as it is in many similar cases. All this is unfortunately true. And it is true, not only as regards the anthracite strike, but as regards many strikes in which officers piedged to the preserment of law fail to do their duty. In closing its trenchant editorial, the Brooklyn Eagle well says that "recourse to the commission was an expedient. The inquiry of the commission but scratched the surface. THE FRANCHISE FIGHT.

William M. Garland, the proponent, under cover, of the 3-cent fare blanket franchise, has seen fit to make a sp cinc denial that the Southern Pacific or any one connected with the Harr man railroad interests, is back of his sensational proposition to parallel all existing street railway lines in this city. Notwithstanding this denial, the evidence is strong that Southern Pa-cific money—or possibly a combination cific money-or possibly a combination of steam railroad interests-is backing

One thing is as plain as anything can be, and that is that this franchise contest has reached a stage where it is positively necessary that the real ntity of the applicant or applicants for the privileges asked shall be re-vealed. There has been too much mystery about this matter. There has been too much dealing in the dark. The City Council, and the people of Los Angeles, whose servants the Counclimen are, are entitled to know with whom they are asked to deal in this affair, which is a matter of the most vital public concern. The Council, and the Board of Public Works, will be fully justified in refusing—and, in fact, should refuse, point blank—to proceed any further in the affair until the identity of the applicant or applicants for the franchise shall have been fully made known to the public. There must be no further hiding behind inadequate William M. Garland, nor any other person.

There is little doubt that the granting of the blanket franchise, as asked, would depreciate the stocks of the Huntington . urban and . interurban place. lines-at least, temporarily. This fact almost forces the conclusion that attem railway interests of some kind are back of the enterprise, and that the infliction of injury upon the Huntthe City Council—or, rather, the Board of Public Works: for it is a pretty well-established fact that the proposed lines could not be built, maintained and operated upon a basis of 3-cent fares without heavy losses to the investors, whoever they may be. It thus becomes almost a foregage conclusion that the Garland application. almost a foregone conclusion that the Garland application is not a legitimate business proposition, but is rather, as The Times has characterized it, an attempted game of freeze-out, on a large scare, in which this municipality is invited to take sides against Mr.

Huntington and his interests.

This view of the case—a view which is compelled by the logic of the situation-discredits and casts suspicion upon the whole scheme of Garland and his mysterious principal or principals.

That way is to reveal the identity reason for saying that this is no longe In another column of this issue is of the responsible person or persons a California city—that the easterners republished from the Brooklyne Daily behind the scheme. Until this person have wiped out the last trace of the or these persons shall have been un-masked, the public will justly regard the whole affair in the light of a humbug and an imposition. It is possible that it will be regarded in the same light after the mysterious "angel" (or angels) shall have been unmasked But—we need not anticipate.

The Board of Public Works acted wisely in deferring action upon this matter for a week. In fact, the affair is in no shape for action as the case now stands. And it will not be in shape for action (other than to In shape for action (other than the throw the application overboard entirely) until definite information shall have been given to the public as to the identity of the person or persons with the eminent Secretary takes a few falls whom the city is asked to deal. And the esteemed enemy is being backer or backers shall have be financially responsible,) the city should be given definite assurances ensation for the privileges asked for, if they be granted. A Franchise covering about eighty miles of streets in a rapidly-expanding city is not a mere trifle to be disposed of for a song. The privileges asked for should bring to if they be granted. A franchise coverlion dollars, as a minimum, with a possible maximum of at least doubl should ever be built-which may be regarded as at least extremely they would cover about all the principal thoroughfares not already covered street railways. If the streets are be turned over to street railways in this wholesale manner, the munici tial sum in compensation for the extraordinary privileges granted.

It is clearly the duty of the Board of Public Works, and of the City Cou cil, to go slow-very slow-in this af-fair. Taking the case as it is now preented, if definite action were to taken, the only safe course to pursue vould be to throw out the application fathered by Garland. But Mr. Garland and his principal (or principals)—if he can produce him or them—are entitled to their "day in court," and of course they are to have it. They must be required, however, to make out a case before they will be entitled to receive consideration. They must be made to show their hand, fairly, openly, un-equivocally. And under no circumequivocally. And under he stances must they be permitted to use the officials and the people of this municipality as a club to knock down business rivals, or to further any self-ish schemes which they may hope to promote, to the detriment of the city

It is a time for our representatives city government to use their itmost vigilance and their highest judgment for the protection of the people, whose interests they were elected to serve, and whose welfare it is their first duty to promote

It seems almost ridiculous that Los Angeles should tamely let all the minor towns and cities in the vicinity build large and palatial tourist hotels and not undertake to construct at least one smashingly fine caravansary on her own account. Santa Barbara has one magnificent venture in that direction and is promised another; Sar Diego has for years drawn thousands of visitors away from this city be-cause of her hotel beside the sounding sea, and Pasadena is also well equipped with alluring and comr accommodations for those persons who demand the best of things going, have the money to pay for it, and are willing to pay the score, whatever the size of it may be. Los Angeles should bestir herself and keep within her borders some of the visitors from abroad, who could be kept here if we had a tourist hotel—not in the heart of town, but amid trees and flowers and lawns and in other words for years, but the sentiments contained in this paragraph will bear repeating until there is no longer reason for the repetition. The people of Los Angeles who live In the lower levels of the city are thoroughly aroused on the sumphole up 1000, even though it be but tempoquestion, but whether they will remain in that frame of mind for any great length of time remains to be seen. The average American, who is full of busi-ness, permits his indignation to rise to the boiling point until he becomes too engrossed with other matters to keep his mad up; and then forgets all about his mad spell or whom he was mad at. But the outraged citizen of Los Ange-les who has had his lawns, and carpets, and wearing apparel ruined by the overflow from the nasty oil wells on the hills is hardly likely to forget the recent drastic dose that he received from that quarter. If he does he really deserves to have another coating of the same next winter again.

Yes, fellows, that is the tourist who counts. He pot only comes out to the Promised Land to enjoy himself, and does it, but he buys progerty and puts up a house with verandas around it and all sorts of gewgaws thereupon wherever they can be made to stick.

That makes this type of tourist come Vest next winter for a little longer That makes this type of tourist come West next winter for a little longer time than he did this winter, and the winter after that still longer, and about the fourth winter he arrives with the horses and cows from the old place, Joins the Chamber of Commerce and is a permanent feature of the great human show in Los Angeles, which has few equals on any stage of action.

which has few equals on any stage of action.

Yes, indeed, fellows, the tourist crop is a great old crop, even if there are some weeds between the fruited rows thereof. The brakebeam bunch that perform feats of dexterity in getting here, and who go into the hold-up business after they arrive, are a mighty weedy lot of cattle, but when the long-promised rock pile gets down to a working basis things may be different with respect to that particular element. All cannot possibly be gold that rides over the shining rails of a transcontinental road, fellows. We must expect some galvanized pewter specimens of humanity to come butting into the surroundings and making trouble. And you want to cultivate the tourist crowd more than you are doing, fellows, even though a few of him, or her, are not quite up to the standard. You ought to pave several hundreds of miles of thoroughfare with asphalt this year, now that hundreds of tons of gravel have been washed away by the late enthusiastic freshet. You would have had to plow that gravel up and haul it away but for those rains.

You ought to have a Jim Dandy of a boulevard from Pasadena, via Los Angeles, to the sea, on which next winter's tourist could bowl in his automobile without putting the fire out in his boiler because of plunging into a chuck hole some place down the road. You ought to be out diggting holes along the sidewalks of Los Angeles, to sit trees in, that some day, when the tourist crop becomes a summer ripener, there will be plenty of shade for him to rest under.

there will be plenty of shade for him to rest under.
You ought, by gracious, fellows, to settle that infernal sumphole question before the next rainy season begins, if you don't do another lick on anything for a whole blessed year!
Remarks were made in this same place last Sunday about the sumphole and its entangling alliances with the foot of man and woman, but that is a question about which too many roars cannot be made so long as it is as nearly paramount as it looks to be in Los Angeles.
You can't make me believe, fellows, that a sumphole has any business existing in the very center of the largest town in the great Southwest.
The tourist you must have with you, if things are to be kept running at high pressure, but he'll stop coming, as sure as fate, if he is compelled to wade in crude oil shoe-top deep whenever he ventures abroad after a rainfall.
Treat him right—don't skin him: don't oil his pathway with sumphole debris; don't let highwaymen hold him up: don't let him have to sit in the sun when he wants to rest, and he will keep on coming, more and more of him, so long as the roses scent the trade winds from the sea, and so long as the bluest of blue skies leans above this land of loveliness and song.

There's Only One Sanitary Beach

For years the people of Southern California and Arizona have awaited the time when there would be established a seaside resort where salt water bathing could be enjoyed in pure sea water, which cannot be done where all the sewage, constantly increasing, from rapidly growing cities, is permitted to flow into the Ocean. It has been said it could not otherwise be disposed of, but nerve money and skill always find a way. The Hermosa Beach Company, at an enormous expense, have installed the ONLY SUB-SURFACE SEWER SYSTEM ON THE PACIFIC COAST, and is therefore far ahead of all other Beaches as the ONLY SANITARY BEACH. The disposition of the sewage is made over the top of the sand dunes to the east, one-half mile back from the ocean, in unglazed tile pipe underneath the surface of the ground, and NOT ONE DROP IS PERMITTED TO FLOW INTO THE OCEAN to pollute the waters. Read what prominent engineering experts have to say of the sanitary conditions at Hermosa Beach. Letter reproduced from the original on file in our office:

Messrs. Burbank & Baker,

Agts. Hermosa Beach Land and Water Co.:

We hereby report that after full and complete examination of the Septic Sewer System at Hermosa Beach, and after testing for alignment and grades of sewers, and workmanship and condition of structures, the working of the flush tanks and the automatic regulation of the pumping of the treated sewage and its discharge onto the filter teds, we hereby pass and accept for the Hermosa Beach Land and Water Co. this sewer system as completed, and we wish in addition to express our appreciation of the particularly satisfactory method of Mr. Arthur S. Bent, the contractor, in doing his work and of accommodating himself to the unforeseen difficulties of putting into concrete shape these plans for the efficient sewering of an ocean beach resort, the first undertaking of this class in Southern California.

An Ideal Beach

Hermosa has all the improvements of a modern, up-to-date city, including miles of wide, substantial sidewalks, graded streets, a perfect water system, gas for fuel and illuminating purposes, electric lights, telephone exchange, sanitary sewer system, electric and steam railroads. What more is needed?

All improvements at Hermosa Beach are of the highest order of excellence, and no expense or trouble has been spared in their in-

We feel confident in saying that the cottages at Hermosa are of a better grade than have ever been erected at any Southern Calilorn'a beach. This is a significant fact,

When purchasing beach property, inform yourself of the disposition of the sewage, for upon this depends the health of yourself and family, as the constant action of the waves permit the gases from the sewage in the water to come to the surface, and the ocean breezes are constantly carrying them over the land. Unless other disposition is made of this waste material other than in the sea, the arising gases always have been and always will be a menace to health, and to this end the Hermosa Company has spared no expense to protect the health of the public at this beach. What other beach can say this? 'Do you want a beach home? The advantages of Hermosa are many and self-evident. Go and see for yourself.

accordance with a suggestion by Director W. D. Stephens of Chamber of Commerce and indorsed by the Council, the City Attorlottering on the sidewalks and public places of the city. This ordinance is expected to stir up a commotion among the gentry who usually line the curb-stones on Main and Los Angeles streets and discuss the great questions of the day. Doubtless many persons will object to receiving the point of the policeman's club in the short ribs and an order to move on, but Los Angeles is fast putting on metropolitan airs and much curbations arrays as are seen in such curbstone arrays as are seen in Los Angeles are not permitted in the big cities of the East.

Not a few will be glad to learn that the ordinance will also be aimed at the the ordinance will also be aimed at the class of seen who loiter along the sidewalk in front of the principal hotels, egling every good-looking woman who passes. Very frequently, and particularly on Saturday nights, the sidewalk space in front of the hotels and cigar stands along Spring street is reduced to a minimum by the crowd of well-dressed sports, dudes and ladies' men who train their optic batteries on the women as they pass, much to the discomfiture and disgust of many. Visitors from the East are continually expressing surprise that such things are tolerated.

Under the existing ordinance the police have no power to make persons

Under the existing ordinance the police have no power to make persons pass on unless they are actually obstructing the passage of others along the sidewalk. Chief Elton believes that the new ordinance is needed, no more for the men who line the curbstones on Los Angeles and Main streets than for the Spring-street mashers.
"In most of the eastern cities the law authorizes a policeman to prevent loitering and congregating on the sidewalks," says Chief Elton, 'but in Los Angeles the police are powerless unless the sidewalk is actually obstructed. In one eastern city, according to a report received from the police department, there were some ten thousand arrests during the year for loitering. I believe a new ordinance would be a very good thing."

The draft of the ordinance is very brief. It simply states that it shall be unlawful to loiter on the sidewalks or to obstruct them in any manner and preseribes a penalty for the disregard of the law. It is not expected that the measure will meet with opposition in the Council.

Ladies predominated in the protesting delegation, which appeared yeater-day, and they presented a very bold front. It was asserted that the protest bore over 800 feet, and that the prediction was signed by only about 700 feet. Owing to some contest over the frontage question, the final consideration of the application was postponed one week.

It is asserted by the applicant that that section of Pico, street is deatined to become business property; that there is a Chinese wash-house and a wood and coal yard in close proximity, in addition to a grocery and drug store. The building is to be constructed of brick, with cement floors, and will cost about $12,000. A large section of the west end territory is tion of the application was postponed one week.

It is asserted by the applicant that that section of Pico, street is destined to become business property: that there is a Chinese wash-house and a wood and coal yard in close proximity, in addition to a grocery and drug store. The building is to be constructed of brick, with cement floors, and will cost about $12,000. A large section of the west end territory is without a livery stable, and a general demand for the building is stated. The applicants contended before the board that the only question at issue was the fire risk.

The protestants maintain that the location chosen is in the resident section of the city, and that the value of their property will be greatly depreciated, if the livery stable is placed there.

Pomeroy W. Powers and County Treasurer Mark Jones appeared before the beard to favor the petition.

Mayor Snyder did not attend the session, because his stand on the question might be deemed to be due to the fact that Mr. Powers was his political opponent in the recent city election.

The usual number of speculative stories were aftoat, yesterday, but none of them had any substantial foundation in fact. The woman grew white and reached for a pen. Suddenly she threw down the pen and gave a fearful scream. Before any one could go to her, she had jumped to her feet, and was giving out a series of agonizing, piercing shrieks. Two men ran to her support, but she hung limp in their arms. In the end they had to pick her up bodly and carry her from the room. Rogers seemed greatly distressed. "It was arranged that both she and her husband should sign the note," he said. "I didn't know she was in such a condition."

When the jury brought in a verdict acquitting her husband, the woman quickly revived, and a feeble hurrah could be heard in the courtroom from the room where she lay.

S. P. Osborne, who was booked at the Police Station as Harry Phillips, got into some kind of a complication with Mrs. F. Anderson, who resides at No. 265½ South Spring street, on Friday evening. He was arraigned on a batter—charge, sworn to by the woman, and she showed the hump on her jaw where Osborne had struck her with his fist. It wasn't a real good subject to ventilate, and without much explanation Osborne was given twenty days.

A gentleman met a young woman who had formerly been a servant in his house, and in a peculiar way he said to assertion of the proposition that an independent laborer has no rights which a "union" laborer is bound to respect, a reign of terror extending through weeks and months and a condition of threatened famine in a product necessary to humanity, are all in the account. And more than this. The right of men to be, the right of gene to own and to save and so manage their own avails was stricken down. The account is smeared with blood. It is strown with the sacrifices of fundamental principles. It is peopled with the memories of horror and intimidation. And all because the plainest doctrines of responsibility, of duty, and of law paramount were disregarded by soulless proposition that the admitted claim to strike carries not in it the diversion of slaying, maiming, burning, dyna-miting, boycotting and terrorizing those who differ from the plans or policies of unionism, and who would exercise the rights of men, presumed to be free in a land, not yet presumed to be en-siaved.

Handful of Union Agitators Planning Trouble.

Employers Ready to Resist-Prosperous Workmen Decry the Movement.

Strangulation of all industry in Los Angeles is planned for May 1 by un-on-labor agitators. Gray, Biddle and Hay, fomentors of discord, and leeches who are sucking the life-blood of toilers enlisted in labor organizations, declare there must be a strike of all union men as a demon-stration of their "power."

The opening week of the coming month has been chosen as the supreme time for the "demonstration," as the city will be filled with strangers to view the Flesta and to hear President Rosevelt, who will be here May 8.

Reservent, who will be here May 8.

It is claimed by the agitators that no one will dare resist their demands at that time, and that the "demonstration" will be all the more telling because of the interest that will be centered in Los Angeles during the featival. Citizens will be "taught a lesson," and members of the organizations are assured by the promoters of discord that they can best "show the merchants their strength" by "tying up the wheels of industry."

Rumblings of the coming eruption have been heard for several weeks. At ery union meeting the men have en urged to "be ready for May 1." umbers of small strikes have occurred, invariably with disaster to the strikers, and this result has made the glisters only more desfrous of calling a general strike to force employers to sow to union dictation.

Attempts have been made to organized to the control of the Attempts have been made to organize various bodies of workmen now outside the union pale, notably conductors and motormen of electric rail-way systems, but these efforts have met with saliure owing to the alacrity with which street-railway officials have undone the work of organizers, discharging right and left all employes future consorting with the trouble-breeders.

Hoycotts have been planned against manufacturers and merchants, but in the face of the notable failures of the past they have not yet been declared. Other methods of creating industrial light have been contemplated and in some cases put into meffective operations and the category of trades-union declitry has been exhausted in a search for plans of attack on the general prosperity of the city.

As a final test the May strike is planned. On this the hundful of agitators who claim to control all organized labor base their hopes of forcing recognition of the unions, of dictating the their dupes where they shall trade, of prescribing to employers who shall be given work, and of compelling all artisans and laborers to join unions or remain without work.

That the demands of the small crowd of agitators will be met with resistance is indicated by the attitude of the heads of local industry. H. E. Huntington, the street-railway magnate, has declared that he will conduct his affairs without interference by the dictators or stop business entirely, the hats saffairs without interference by the dictators or stop business entirely. He hats saffairs without interference by the dictators or stop business entirely, the hats saffairs without interference by the dictators or stop business entirely. He hats saffairs without interference by the dictators or stop business entirely. He, hats saffairs without interference by the dictators or stop business entirely. He, hats saffairs without interference by the dictators or stop business entirely. He, hats saffairs without interference by the dictators or stop business entirely. He, hats saffairs without interference by the dictators of stop business entirely. As a fair without interference by the dictators of the limited number of unsaffairs without interference by the dictators of the city and the second of the conduct of his business to irresponsible union laders, and his long pure backs up

In two recent engagements these associations have been vistorious. By standing closely together for their rights they have succeeded in retaining control of their business and have humificated the agitators. Sheet-metal workers who have been in strike for five weeks have lost every point for which they struck and in addition have been forced to forego many of the privileges they formerly enjoyed. After an average loss of $14 per week in wages, most of the strikers find the spalves without employment and absolutely without power as an organization.

the handful of agitators who is movement have any interest for a strike. They reap their reward by creating misery men they presume to direct.

IN SUNDAY AND HOLY WEEK PROGRANGE. PRAL ENTRY INTO JERUSA- Treatment for MEN

For the Exact Cause Treatment Par Excellence

The Most Potent, Rational, Direct and Specific for the Cure of

Through years of experience and close application, no less then twenty. I have simmered down to an exact science what nature requires. By m; methods cause and conditions are apparent. Half the failures are due to misunderstand ing of causes and for this reason I insist upon a thorough examination which is the foundation or basic principle of a cure. I search out the exact cause of each disordered condition and guess at nothing: Experience and training of the right kind counts for much, it proves that a knowledge of different diseases, the changes under which they go, their successful treatment and cure cannot be had by guesswork.

These are the principal features upon which I have built my practice and upon which I expect to maintain it.

When I promise a cure I mean just what I say. I will know the exact conditions and just what trouble I'm to deal with. I have been foremost in advocating "The exact cause treatment," which accounts in a great measure for

NOT BY MAIL

Why Guess, When You Can See and Know.

My examinations consist of more than you usually get, and when I have finished you will understand why I refuse to treat by this unreliable mail method. I will know jest what to do and how to do it to give results in one week that you could never get by mail treatment. I seafch out every condition leading up to the disorder and apply treatment for the "EXACT CAUSE," which cures quickly and permanently.

Mail Treatment

Fallure-No Matter What Others Say to the Contrary. How many times have you treated by mail? How many times have you guessed at your condition? And how many times have you had others guess at it, and how many times have you met with failure? I'm ready to prove my claim. I can do more in ene week, make a better cure, give you more lasting results than you can ever hope to receive by mail. I take no part in such guess-work. When I treat a condition I know just what to do, and just how to do it, and the effect will be just what you desire, and all I promise. Its the real cures I desire, and not mere suppression of symptoms for a monetary consideration.

Why My Treatment Cures.

It is local and direct; it is for the "Exact Cause" and condition, and is personally given in my office so I may know the results as they are obtained and note changes, adapting the treatment to the actual condition, thus doing away with guess work. A treatment may help for a few days, then stop, and it is by noting these changes that conditions are made better each time. This is why you are not cured by mail treatment, because there is too ninch guessing at the condition to be treated.

Functional Decline

Fagging of Strength I believe the treatment I employ in the eure of this derangement is the only act-entitic. Trational and absolutely certain method whereby functional activityof the parts can be fully restored to normal. I do not excite temporary activity. This would be followed by reaction, Instead, I remove the local cause. "EXACT removes the local cause, "EXACT restores normal in the derangement, and restore normal conditions the congestion or findamnation is removed, circulation is increased, and the parts take on a healthy, strong and vigorous action, the effect of which is felt throughout the entire body. Mean suffereing from general debility will find the cause directly trace-able to these conditions. Varicocele 4 to 6 Days

To all who have treated for this condition and falled to obtain satisfactory results, I wish to say I offer an absolute cure in 4 to 6 days, devoid of any painful, harsh measures. The cure I offer is sepecially thorough and permanent. There are no evil after effects to undermine the health and power. My treatment shows an improvement from the first application, All pain ceases, soreness subsides, and a normal physiological condition is brought about without surgery, causely or bain. The circuistion is complete with increased strength and remand vitality. In the cure of varicocels I offer a service little cure of varicocels I offer a service little and Agramantal curp.

Statement of Interest to Many Men. Merit in Every Application I Make.

I Wait for My Fee until You are Cured.

With the greater number of men seeking relief for the early decline of strength, I wish to say, my treatment accomplishes more in two to four weeks' time than we could ever hope to accomplish in six months by stomach drugging. The man who has suffered disappointment at the hands of many is the man I am most anxious to meet. He is the one who is quickest to recognize that there is merit in every application I me in effecting a cure. I am especially seeking those who have been disappointed. I will show them rational method of treatment that will appeal to their better judgment and one that is for the betterment of their physical cendition, Contagious Blood Diseases.

Hemorrhoids or Piles Cured Without Operating.

Piles are the outcropping of pathological conditions which may be treated persistently for years without cure. I treat these conditions for real and permanent results by local personal application, which restores tone to the hemorrhoidal veiss by improving the circulation in the abdominal and pelvic organs. I prevent engorgements, which at the same time cures constipation. Surgery is too arbitrary to be effective with minor ills which come from wrong living. Of course there are cases when it is surgery or nothing. There are fewer than is generally supposed. There is too much operating too much cutting. No matter how long you have suffered, I will effect a permanent cure of every case that comes to me. My examination consists of something more than you usually get, and is such that it reveals the exact pathe-logical condition, which is susceptible to my personal and exact cause

Exhausted Nerve Force.

It is now conceded by all physicians that our theory of "WEAKNESS" in men is but the effect of "nerve exhaustion." This weakness may fake on different forms; even the same cause does not affect all men alike. To understand "why" it does not requires skill and intimate knowledge of cause and effect in the troubles peculiar to men. This knowledge can only be gained by a thorough training and long experience in this particular specialty. This training must be preceded by years of hard study in acquiring a thorough knowledge of medicine. To know why certain symptoms are the result of a certain cause, or why these symptoms are but the reflex action of a remote cause, requires just the education—we claim every successful specialist must possess.

In reality the conditions that exist in "nerve exhaustion" are little understood by the majority of physicians. Why? Because they have falled to acquire the special education that prepares them for special work—for that reason their efforts in treating diseases peculiar to men are in the great majority of cases complete failures. Dr. Harrison many years ago saw the necessity of especially preparing himself to combat successfully those forms of "weakness" that are caused by "exhausted nerve force." So complete and thorough his education, so successful his treatment—that many others have sought to imitate his methods. They have failed. Why? Because our methods are known only to ourselves. Most medical men, according to their liking and experience, have a psculiar interest in some certain class of diseases.

Such an interest Dr. Harrison has long felt toward functional diseases of the mere system. The nervous diseases of the male reproductive system belong to the more frequent forms of diseases. A large contingent of these nervous cases is furnished by those manifestations which have their origin in local changes, which must be looked upon as reflex. In this connection, the most harmful influence on the prostate becomes catarrhal, and if prontate catarrh becomes chronic various
